THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC.

ALL QUIET ALONG THE LINES.

A Flag of Truce Sent to the Enemy.

Reported Movement of the Fifth Army Corps.

ORDERS FROM GEN. MEADE.

Regular Communication with the Army.

HEADQUARTERS OF THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, June 7, 1864.

All is quiet along the lines to-day.

There is occasional firing only in the direction of Bottom's Bridge.

The mails are now regularly received in the army, the arrangements being most complete under the management of D. P. PARKER and W. B. HASLETT, Postmasters of the Army of the Potomac.

Newspapers will also arrive regularly from this date, under the direction of Mr. LANE, news agent.

THE FLAG OF TRUCE.

HEADQUARTERS OF THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, June 8, 1864—5 o'clock, A. M.

The flag of truce sent out by Gen. GRANT was arranged for last evening, and under the direction of the Corps Commanders the dead and wounded between the lines of works were brought off.

There were very few wounded at some points, while at others quite a number were found.

None but medical officers and stretcher-bearers were allowed to go on the field, and all intercourse with the enemy was strictly prohibited.

At the end of the time agreed upon for the truce to end, a voice from the enemy's lines sung out, "Boys, get to your holes! The time is up!"

All hands then at once left.

A few shells were thrown on our left yesterday afternoon by the enemy; but they did no damage.

A portion of the Fifth Corps is reported as having arrived at a point on the Chickahominy, near Bottom's Bridge, and considerable firing was heard in that direction yesterday afternoon.

A party of rebels, consisting of a Captain, Lieutenant and five privates, came into our lines yesterday with a flag of truce, looking for the body of an officer, and our men at that point brought them in, not knowing that a flag of truce prevailed. They were returned to their lines last evening.

The railroad from the White House to the army is being put in order, and will be ready for travel in a day or two.

Punishment of a Philadelphia War Correspondent.

HEADQUARTERS OF THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, Tuesday, June 7.

The following orders have just been issued from headquarters, and are published for the benefit of all concerned:

HEADQUARTERS OF THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, June 7, 1864.

GENERAL ORDER.—EDWARD CROPSEY, a correspondent of the Philadelphia Inquirer, having published in that journal, of the 2d instant, a libelous statement on the Commanding General of this army, calculated to impair the confidence of the army in their commanding officer, and which statement the said CROPSEY now acknowledges to have been false, and to have been based on some idle camp rumor, it is hereby ordered that he be arrested and paraded through the lines of the army with a placard marked "Libeler of the Press," and be then put without the lines and not be permitted to return.

The Provost-Marshal-General will see that this order is promptly executed.

The Commanding-General trusts that this example will deter others from committing like offences, and he takes this occasion to notify the representatives of the public press that, while he is ready at all times to extend them every facility for acquiring facts, and giving circulation to the truth, he will not hesitate to punish with the utmost rigor all instances like the above, where individuals take advantage of the privileges accorded them, to circulate falsehoods, and thus impair the confidence which the public and the army should have in their Generals and other officers. By command of Major-Gen. MEADE.

E. S. WILLIAMS, A. A. General.

THE OBJECTIONABLE PARAGRAPH.

The following is probably the paragraph which has provoked this sentence. It occurs in a letter from the correspondent in question, dated Mongonick, May 27:

"Let me break the thread of narrative, and say a word of MEADE's position. He is as much the Commander of the Army of the Potomac as he ever was. GRANT plans and exercises a supervisory control over the army, but to MEADE belongs everything of detail. He is entitled to great credit for the magnificent movements of the army since we left Brandy, for they have been directed by him. In battle he puts troops in action and controls their movements; in a word, he commands the army. Gen. GRANT is here only because he deems the present campaign the vital one of the war, and wishes to decide on the spot all questions that would be referred to him as General-in-Chief.

History will record, but newspapers cannot, that on one eventful night during the present campaign, GRANT's presence saved the army and the nation too; not that Gen. MEADE was on the point of committing a blunder unwittingly, but his devotion to his country made him loth to risk her last army on what he deemed a chance. GRANT assumed the responsibility, and we are still On to Richmond."

Dismissal of Col. McLeod Murphy.

[EXTRACT.]

SPECIAL ORDERS No. 42.—Lieut.-Col. M. C. MURPHY, of the One Hundred and Seventieth New-York Volunteers, having, on the 28th ult., presumed to send a flag of truce to the enemy's lines without any authority whatever, is hereby dishonorably dismissed from the military service of the United States, subject to the approval of the President.

By command of Major-Gen. MEADE.

FROM BUTLER'S ARMY.

Signs of a Forward Movement.

Special Correspondence of the Commercial Advertiser.

FORTRESS MONROE, Tuesday, June 7.

An invalid officer who has just arrived here from Bermuda Hundreds has furnished me with some very interesting news from that quarter. He says that the indications in Gen. BUTLER's camp are very numerous of another forward movement, but in what direction is known, of course, only to the high officials. Conjectural points, however, are freely canvassed in camp, and among these Petersburgh is the oftenest mentioned.

A scout, who recenly arrived in camp, had ascertained that the fort on the Appomattox, this side of Petersburgh, is deserted, or nearly so, by the rebels. The gunboats all went up the river on Saturday, and before dark the last one of the fleet was out of sight. A pontoon bridge is thrown across the Appomattox, near the Hundreds, and several signal officers crossed on Sunday to the fort on the opposite side. A corduroy road has also been completed through a swamp, and running from our front to the opposite side of the Appomattox, above our picket lines.

Just as our informant was on the point of leaving, a brother officer said to him: "You needn't be surprised to hear very soon of the moving of a heavy force from this department to the rear of Richmond. We have pontoon bridges enough to span all the rivers near Richmond in a dozen places."

On Friday, the 3d inst, a tour was made of the forts and rifle-pits comprising our defences, the line of which extends from the Appomattox River to the James. These defences are as strong as engineering skill, coupled with abundant labor, could possibly make them. The rifle-pits are all flanked with full batteries, and it was believed on the ground that it would be impossible for any force to carry them.

The rebels have already demonstrated, to their own heavy loss, the efficiency of these works. Their attack on Thursday, the 3d inst., was made on the pits of the advanced picket line, which were situated at some distance in front of the principal line. This line they carried, mainly in consequence of the negligence of the Lieutenant in charge. But, when they subsequently advanced upon one of our own redoubts, about two hundred yards in front of the main line, they met with a reception that sent them staggering back, leaving many killed and wounded, besides a number of prisoners, in our hands. A rebel Colonel was killed in this attack. The Lieutenant who was in command of our pickets at these pits has been reduced to the ranks for not holding the position until reinforcements reached him. The rebels were afterward driven from the captured pits, which are now held by two companies of one of the Maine regiments.

GEN. AVERILL'S OPERATIONS.

Spirited Account of the Great Southern Virginia Raid.

Its Object—Destruction of Railroads, Bridges and Medical Stores—A Gallant and Obstinate Fight—Gen. Averill Wounded—Incidents, &c., &c., &c.

Special Correspondence of the New-York Times.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY DIVISION, DEPARTMENT OF WEST VIRGINIA, LEWISBURGH, Sunday, May 22, 1864.

The cavalry raid of that dashing and gallant officer, Gen. AVERILL, made from Charleston, West Virginia, May 6, was undoubtedly one of the most hazardous and brilliant of the war. It was, too, successful. All and more than the usual dangers of field and flood were encountered—rivers were swam, forests penetrated, mountains scaled, unknown regions traversed, enemies met. For upward of sixty miles of the mountain travel there was nothing but precipitous bridle-paths, and for that distance did the men on foot drag themselves and their horses up and down. But seven days' rations and proportionate ammunition had been taken. For eighteen days—including four days after meeting Gen. CROOK—the command were unheard of by their friends. After the 11th their ammunition was about exhausted, and but for the fortunate capture of a rebel train on the 9th, they would have been without food; as it was they were seven days on half rations. They had ridden, walked, forded, swam, climbed and fought during the raid of three hundred and fifty miles, exhibiting an endurance and heroism challenging the admiration of the world of chivalry.

THE OBJECTS OF THE RAID.

The principal object of Gen. AVERILL's movement was to distract the attention of the rebel Gens. JENKINS and the noted JOHN MORGAN, and by diverting it toward himself prevent a junction of their forces against Gen. CROOK, who designed moving on to Dublin, destroying the stores and the Virginia and Tennessee Railroad at that place and the bridge (the largest and the finest in the South) on New River, seven miles above. The purpose was accomplished, Gen. CROOK effecting the complete destruction he designed, and Gen. MORGAN the while, as it proved, holding himself at Wythville, southwest about thirty miles distant on the railroad, in expectation of Gen. AVERILL. Another purpose of the raid was the destruction of the road at whatever point it should be struck, and Gen. AVERILL starting from Charleston May 1, selected Wythville as his destination. His command consisted of the First, Second and Third Virginia and Fourteenth Pennsylvania Cavalry, and the Thirty-fourth Ohio Mounted Infantry—in all 2,500 men.

REBELS GOBBLED UP.

The march was without especial incident until the evening of the 7th, when the advance suddenly came upon and gobbled up some rebel pickets; rapidly advancing, they came upon an entire company of the Eighth Virginia Cavalry, part of JOHN MORGAN's men, engaged in games of ball and quoits, capturing the whole of them, save the Captain, who escaped to the bushes. The horses were also taken. In the surprise, only some five or six shots were fired, and they without injury. The rebs. were bewildered at first, chagrined afterward, and expressed surprise at the temerity of the raid. This occurred at Abb's Valley, 140 miles southeast of Charleston. The presence of a superior force in that section was suspected, and the command that night camped on the play-ground of their prisoners.

THE MARCH CONTINUED.

The next morning, two miles from camp, rebel pickets were met, who opened a fire on our advance; they were driven back and the march continued, until the enemy were found posted in the woods on the hills. Scouts were sent forward, but were driven back, some wounded, without being able to ascertain the number of the opposing force.

A FIGHT.

Gen. AVERILL concluded to fight; the nature of the ground was such that cavalry was useless, and the Thirty-fourth Ohio and Second Virginia, ordered to dismount, were thrown out as skirmishers on either flank; they gallantly went to their work; brisk firing ensued, our men pressed forward into the woods and up the hills, from one to another of which the rebels were driven for twelve miles, when they broke cover and fled to Jeffersonville, three miles beyond. This skirmishing wood and hill fighting had continued for six hours. Of Gen. AVERILL's command two were killed and five wounded; the rebels lost seventeen killed and carried off their wounded. At the close of the fight a man well posted in the military policy of the rebels, came in and surrendering himself to Gen. AVERILL, took the oath of allegiance. He gave much valuable information, and specially valuable—the fact that MORGAN was then at Saltsville, twenty miles from Jeffersonville, with a strong force on the qui vive for our command. It was further ascertained that all the mountain passes on the route from Jeffersonville to Wythville were strongly guarded, and that passage through would be impossible.

A REBEL TRAIN CAPTURED.

That night, therefore, Gen. AVERILL marched back seven miles, branching off ten miles to Princeton, where he camped. The next morning, a mile out, a rebel train of ten wagons, loaded with provisions, was captured; what the force required, and they were sadly in need, was taken and the balance destroyed.

MEDICAL STORES DESTROYED.

A colored woman came up to the rear guard of the column and informed them that in a cave about a mile up the mountain medical stores were concealed. Twelve men were detailed to search for them, and on reaching the spot were assailed by some thirty rebels on guard. They retreated to the main column and returned reinforced. The rebels skedaddled, the cave was entered, a large quantity of medicines and of surgical instruments were discovered, all of which were destroyed. A weary march was taken across Walker Mountain to Mountain Gap, and the next day (the 10th) a forced march of twenty-five miles brought the command to Cave Mountain Gap, five miles from the expected goal—Wythville. The Gap was reached at 3 P. M., and here

THE GALLANT FIGHT OCCURRED.

Evidently information of our movements had reached MORGAN, for at the Gap was unexpectedly discovered the redoubtable rebel chief, with full 5,000 cavalry and infantry, and four pieces of cannon. Portions of his force were strongly posted on each side of the Gap, and upon the cliffs to the front and sides, while the cannon commanded the approach. Our force, thus suddenly, and, as it would seem, overwhelmingly met, had been reduced to 2,000 men, 500 having been on the 6th day dispatched to reinforce Gen. CROOK. Scarcely had the rebels, thus impregnably ensconced, been revealed in front, ere two heavy lines of skirmishers, strongly supported, were discovered rapidly advancing, and in splendid style, over a clearing and on to our right flank. The two discoveries were almost simultaneous. Gen. AVERILL at once took in the perilous situation; to retreat was ruin, to advance certain destruction, to surrender was never thought of. Nothing was to be done but to hold his ground, make desperate, stubborn resistance, and during it to await the cover of the night. The gallant Col. SCHOONMAKER, commanding the second brigade, was, with the Fourteenth Pennsylvania and First Virginia, (mounted,) hurriedly thrown out across to the right of the road on a rise, there to meet the approaching columns, which they nobly did, receiving the fire of the enemy—presenting a front of twice their own—at close range, and returning it so rapidly and with such deadly effect, that repeated attempts to charge upon them failed. Col. SCHOONMAKER made no attempt to advance, but held his position under a constant fire for one hour, when, upon a threatened flank movement on his right by the rebel cavalry, Gen. AVERILL ordered him to fall back across the road, and on the right of the second column, which had been formed there, consisting of the Thirty-fourth Ohio and Second and Third Virginia, all dismounted, under the command of Brig.-Gen. DUFFIE. He had suffered considerably, and was compelled to leave his dead and badly wounded on the line where they had fallen. The movement was made leisurely and in excellent order. It was greeted with exultant shouts by the rebels, who pressed rapidly forward as far as the abandoned line, but the now united columns, presenting a solid and unflinching front, delivered with rapidity and withering precision a fire which prevented further advance, and temporarily staggered into confusion the opposing ranks. From the outset of the fight both columns, while holding in check the vastly superior force in front, were subjected at easy musketry range to the cross fire of the infantry and artillery at the Gap. The terrible position of Gen. AVERILL's command no description can convey the correct idea of. They were on a cleared section, with a force double their own to the left, and another double their own to the front, with no cover of hills or woods to fall back to, and with but the one thing to do—to maintain their position under the heavy and continuous fire of shot and shell. The gallantry of Gen. AVERILL and his staff shone conspicuously during the terrific ordeal, as did that of every officer and man in his command—not one was seen to falter. The Second Virginia, on the left of the second column and in close range of the Gap, constantly under murderous fire, extorted the admiration of the enemy and won that of its own command by its splendid conduct. It was firm as a rock; every movement was executed with the ease and precision of a dress parade, and the moral effect of its splendid bearing infused the strength of another regiment. On the field, as in general orders, it received from Gen. AVERILL the warmest praise. Gen. AVERILL was constantly at the front of the first column, and on its falling back, at the front of the command, encouraging and stimulating it to the noble heroism displayed, by his own fearless exposure and dauntless courage. About midway of the fight he was struck in the middle of the forehead by a musket ball, which, glancing, passed off over the left eye, inflicting a deep wound; with the blood flowing profusely, his face undistinguishable from gore, he continued in his saddle until, by weakness, he was compelled to retire to the rear. Here the blood was staunched, the wound dressed, and after a few moments rest he was again in the saddle and to the front, there remaining until the close of the fight. His escape with life was miraculous. For five long hours did this desperate fight continue; not one inch of the second line had been yielded; MORGAN, on repeated attempts to force it, which were made with a rush and amid hellish yells, being repulsed, and when night came he seemed glad to seek repose from the obstinate and bloody contest, and to his stubborn foes that night was indeed welcome. Gen AVERILL's loss in killed and wounded was 135; six prisoners were taken, and from them it was ascertained that the rebel loss was far in excess of ours. The killed and badly wounded were necessarily left in the hands of the enemy, there being no conveyance for them, and at dark, having placed the latter in a farmhouse near by, and leaving a Surgeon in charge, the command hastily got away without any attempt by MORGAN being made to pursue them or even feel their position. A rapid march of thirteen miles was had for Walker's Mountain, with the design of crossing it and reaching Dublin, where Gen. CROOK was expected to be met.

Special mention, ere concluding this portion of my letter, should be made of the associate officers of Gen. AVERILL, few of whom escaped uninjured, for gallantry never had nobler examplars than in Brig.-Gen. DUFFIE and Col. SCHOONMAKER, and in the small but devoted staff composed of Assistant Adjt.-Gen. Rumsey, Capt. George T. Castle, Capt. William H. Brown, Capt. L. A. Myers and Surgeon Fred Elliott; or, than in Col. Copehart, First Virginia, Col. Powell, Second Virginia, Maj. Conger, commanding detachment Third Virginia, Maj. Daily, Acting Colonel Fourteenth Pennsylvania and Col. Shaw, of the Thirty-fourth Ohio. During all the fight the posts of danger were persistently theirs, and their courageous examples were magnetic. It has been stated that a portion of MORGAN's force were cavalry. They were held in reserve during the fight, under cover of the woods to the rear and left of the rebel column, awaiting the moment so vainly sought for, when our lines would be broken and they could charge upon our disordered men.

THE BALANCE OF THE RAID.

When Walker Mountain was reached, it was found that there was but a bridle-path over it, and the wearied men dismounting, dragged themselves and their jaded horses up it. The advance reached the top at midnight, and here the guide irrecoverably lost his way. To continue in the pitchy darkness was impossible. The order was given to halt, and the worn-out men and horses, stretched in single file from base to summit on the precipitous, rocky mountain's side, laid down to rest. Singularly enough, yet confirmatory of the terrible punishment the enemy had received, they were not disturbed, and at daylight were on the march again. The mountain passed, and a forced march made during the day of thirty-two miles, to Dublin. Here was a sad disappointment, for, though the good work of destruction which Gen. CROOK had done was seen, yet he was not met. Remaining over night, an early march was made of seven miles to New River; it was greatly swollen, but was crossed with the loss of two men, four horses, and destruction of all the ammunition, and, ten miles further on, the Virginia and Tennessee Railroad was struck at Christiansburgh. Some scattering rebel forces were found here, but were charged on and driven through and beyond the town, giving no after trouble. The depot here, stored with large amounts of flour, bacon and forage, was burned, the telegraph-office instrument and wires destroyed, the railroad torn up and rails rendered useless, and the bridge, two miles below, burned. Two field-pieces were captured in the village. The command occupied the town over night, moving nineteen miles to Gap Mountain the next morning, where 1,500 rebels, under Col. (or Gen.) W. E. JACKSON, were found strongly posted in a gap, and strengthened by two pieces of artillery. Gen. AVERILL's command was now entirely without ammunition. What little was left after the battle at Cave Mountain had been destroyed while crossing New River. A fight, therefore, was hopeless. So, by a strategic and hasty movement, he turned their left flank seeking a bridle path over the mountain and thence to Sinking Creek Valley, twelve miles distant, JACKSON making no pursuit. On the next day (the 14th) they pushed on twenty-nine miles toward Union, and within five miles thereof fell in with the rear guard of Gen. CROOK's command. It was a gladdening sight and hailed vociferously. On the 15th Gen. AVERILL joined Gen. CROOK, and on the next day held the rear of his army while crossing Green Briar River at Alderson's ford, en route for Meadow Bluff. This duty performed, Gen. AVERILL marched for Burnt Bridge Ford, on same river, where he crossed and made direct for Lewisburgh, reaching there on the 19th. Here, for himself and his gallant command, there was but brief rest promised, for an early expedition in connection with Gen. CROOK had been planned. Its results will be of great importance.

THE REBELS IN KENTUCKY

ANOTHER RAID OF JOHN MORGAN.

Half a Dozen Towns in Their Possession.

John Morgan's Raid into Kentucky.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Thursday, June 9.

About 700 rebel cavalry, supposed to be a part of JOHN MORGAN's force, entered Paris, Ky., last evening, without resistance.

CINCINNATI, Thursday, June 9.

The rebels are near Falmouth, on the Kentucky Central Railroad, and at Williamstown on the Pike, thirty miles from Cincinnati.

A large rebel force is reported twelve miles east of Lexington, and another is approaching from Richmond.

The rebels are also reported between Crab Orchard and Stamford.

They burned the large warehouse and water station at Cynthiana, yesterday.

The rebels now have possession of Paris, Georgetown, Cynthiana and Williamstown.

Negro Enlistments—Kentucky Slavery Fast Disappearing—Kentuckians' Duty in the Emergency—Gov. Bramlette Suspends the Raising of Six Months' Men.

LOUISVILLE, Tuesday, June 7, 1864.

Numerous negro recruits and conscripts, from various sections of this State, West Virginia and elsewhere, are arriving here and at other rendezvous. They generally look cheerful, and sing "John Brown," and other stirring airs as they march along. A majority volunteered, but many have been drafted or impressed. In the First District, it is said, a negro-impressment was ordered at the instance of LUCIEN ANDERSON, as the only mode to fill its quota.

The great fact stares us in the face, that Kentucky Slavery is fast disappearing, and one great practical duty pressing upon Kentuckians is to adapt themselves to the change with the least possible temporary damage or inconvenience to their labor interests. We should not grumble and growl over what was long ago predicted as an inevitable consequence of the rebellion, if doggedly persisted in, but should gratefully accept from the Government whatever compensation it may please to grant, handle the plow ourselves, and invite enterprising white immigrants to help till our neglected fields.

It is understood that Gov. BRAMLETTE has in effect "suspended for the present" the raising of 10,000 six months' men by draft or otherwise, because of the "unexpected action of the Administration in calling into the field the negro laboring population of the State." So I reckon WOLFORD's occupation, as a recruiting officer and orator to raise men under the Governor's call "to give the finishing blow to the rebellion," is at least "suspended for the present." He may do mischief enough, solely as a "Democratic Union" elector at large, if permitted and so disposed. The Governor, by his persistent indorsement of WOLFORD, was subjecting himself to severe reflections from brother Kentuckians certainly as devoted to the Union and the Constitution as himself. We hope that he will henceforth coöperate with Gen. BURBRIDGE, and not, from any further indiscretion or inconsistency, be held in any way or degree responsible for any more of Mr. WOLFORD's incendiary harangues against President LINCOLN and the established policy and accomplished fact of negro enlistments.

PONTIAC.

A NAVAL DISASTER.

Capture of the United States Steamer Water-Witch by the Rebels.

PHILADELPHIA, Thursday, June 9.

The steamer Massachusetts, from the blockading squadron, reports the capture, on the 3d inst., at 2 o'clock in the morning, of the United States steamer Water-Witch, Lieut.-Commander AUSTIN PENDERGRAST, in Ossabaw Sound, Georgia, by eight armed boats sent out from the rebel fort McAlister.

This information was received from one of her crew, the only one who made his escape by jumping over her bows and swimming ashore. He says a desperate resistance was made by her officers and crew, but superior numbers overpowered them and compelled them to surrender.

He cannot tell if they met with any loss, as he saw the action going on as he was secreted in the long grass.

An expedition was fitting out at Port Royal to go down and endeavor to recapture or destroy her.

The Water Witch is a regular navy-built vessel, of 350 tons, five guns, and was considered quite fast.

Marine Disaster, &c.

BOSTON, Thursday, June 9.

The schooner Ralph Hewitt, from Boston for Fortress Monroe, with a cargo of granite, sprung aleak off Block Island, June 6, and sunk. The crew took to the boats, and next morning were picked up by the schooner Catalina, from New-York for Porto Rico, and transferred to the schooner Gen. Scott, from Philadelphia for Boston.

The ship Pomona, from Liverpool, now below, has been ordered to Portland.

Another Prize.

BOSTON, Thursday, June 9.

The British iron prize steamer Thistle, from Bermuda, for Wilmington, arrived here this morning, in charge of Acting Master WILLIAM E. DENISON, and a prize crew, having been captured on the 4th inst., in lat. 32° 36', lon. 76° 04', by the United States steamer Fort Jackson. She had on board a general cargo of merchandise, but most of it was thrown overboard during an exciting chase of six hours. This Thistle is an iron side-wheel steamer of about 250 tons, and of light draft.

AWFUL CATASTROPHE.

Burning of a Hudson River Steamboat.

A Large Number of Passengers on Board.

FROM THIRTY TO FORTY DROWNED

DISTRACTING TALE OF SUFFERING.

A Correspondent of the Times on Board

SPECIAL ACCOUNT

The new and handsome steamer Berkshire, of the New-York and Hudson line, left Hudson night before last at her usual hour, with a heavy freight and an unusual number of passengers. When a few miles below Rondout a fire broke out on the main deck, which was stowed with bales of hay, and increased with such amazing rapidity, enveloping so large a surface at once, that its cause was difficult to trace. It was too distant from the fire-room to have caught therefrom. One account is that it came from the lamp-room, and another supposes it was occasioned by the careless smoking of a cigar.

A very few minutes showed the impossibility of extinguishing it. The boat was therefore headed for shore with the utmost speed, and was favorably beached two miles above Hyde Park.

STATEMENT OF ONE OF OUR CORRESPONDENTS.

INTERESTING DETAILS—THIRTY TO FORTY LIVES SUPPOSED TO BE LOST.

Mr. CHILD, one of the correspondents of this newspaper, was a passenger on the Berkshire, and gives us this statement of the catastrophe:

He had been in the gentlemen's berth cabin, astern, below the main deck, reading, but had fallen asleep in a chair. He was partly conscious of a commotion, and of men running up stairs, when he awoke and found the cabin filling with smoke. Then he heard cries of "fire" above, but he is sure no alarm loud enough to awake people had been given below. This was not far from 10 o'clock. He ran up the two flights of stairs to the large state-room saloon, and found passengers rushing out of their rooms in dire confusion. Capt. POWERS was telling them to go clear forward to the end of the boat, and they seemed to be obeying him. The engines were working with great speed, and the boat headed for shore, yet the flames were driving through the boat with such incredible rapidity that he feared those forward would be compelled to jump from the boat before it struck the shore. He therefore remained aft, thinking it better to jump into the water abaft the wheel, than ahead of it. Recollecting how quiet all had been in the lower cabin, which he had left, and believing some must still be sleeping there, he descended and shrieked out that the vessel was on fire. He found two or three men there, who asked him if there was any way to escape. The smoke had become so dense he could not see if any more left their berths, and hastened up immediately to the main deck, nearly suffocated. Going to the stern he found three men, a lady and two children, and the two colored chambermaids. Then the bow struck, and the vessel was aground, in very shoal water forward, but deep water aft. A strong breeze was blowing, and the middle part of the boat, from the hull to the hurricane deck, was wrapped in flames, roaring, crackling and with a heavy trundling sound, under the terrific draft. Mr. CHILD climbed up a stanchion to the upper guards, and saw the only way to get forward was by climbing over the wheel-house, which he did, having shouted to those he left below that they could do the same, but they did not start. The entire space between the wheels was a mass of fire. Persons were then leaping overboard and wading to the shore, which was about ten rods distant. Here the water was not over three feet deep. Right ahead of the starboard wheel-house two men were trying to make a woman jump over, but she begged to be let alone, saying, in her frenzy, she "would stay and burn before she would jump into that horrid water." As they left her, our informant seized and threw her overboard, and saw her getting toward shore. On the port side the water was a little deeper, and there appeared to be some struggling. A dozen to twenty men were on deck at the bow, when Mr. CHILD left the boat, and they seemed to belong to her. He waded to a very small rocky island, right abeam of the vessel, to see what had become of those he left astern. A woman was in the water there holding on to a hawser, down which was running blazing butter, melted from the casks on deck. She kept changing her hand to hold on to the blazing hawser, dipping the other hand in the water, till they doubtless were so burned that she could not use them longer, then fell off and drowned. Capt. POWER, Mr. CHILD and another man swam out and tried to reach her, but the heat was so intense they were obliged to return. It was said that this lady was Mrs. BULLOCK, of New-York, and the two children lost with her were hers. The two colored chambermaids were also lost. One little boy got ashore who was nearly frantic that his grandmother must be left to perish in her stateroom. The second waiter, and another waiter named JOHN J. JACKSON were lost.

A Mrs. MILLS and child were not to be found. The first body picked up in the water was that of a little boy, four years old, unknown. The list of passengers was not saved. The clerk said there was not far from 120, of whom about one-fourth were women. Not over fifteen women were seen on shore. The Captain and officers were self-possessed and energetic in all that they did; but Mr. CHILD is quite positive that no sufficient alarm was sounded in the ladies' berth cabin, aft on the main deck, nor in the men's cabin; so it is probable that several at least, perished in their berths, or were bewildered by the smoke and lost in the passages. Not a boat was lowered away, or the few unfortunates at the stern might have been rescued.

From the time they abandoned all effort to put out the fire until the vessel struck, it was 10 or 15 minutes. The engines continued working for five minutes after she run aground, and the steam was rushing out from all the valves, that the boilers should not burst.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT FROM POUGHKEEPSIE.

POUGHKEEPSIE, Thursday, June 9.

The steamer Berkshire took fire about two miles above Hyde Park, at 10 o'clock last night, and was totally consumed. The fire is supposed to have been caused by the explosion of a lamp, although one account says it caught in the hay on board, from passengers smoking. The pilot remained at his post, though enveloped in flames, and succeeded in running her ashore.

About one hundred and thirty passengers were on board, but the list is lost, and the exact number of lost cannot be ascertained. The following are known to be lost: The wife and two children of Capt. Bullet, of a Harlem boat; three children of Mrs. Hanford, of Davenport, Delaware County; Catharine Niles, of Spencertown, Columbia County, and daughter; Julia O'Sullivan, of Bloomingdale; ——— Frisbie and John J. Jackson, colored waiters; Miss Hallenback, missing; William Coon, one of the crew, was missing. Eight bodies have been found thus far, some of them not identified.

The passengers state that probably no one escaped from the ladies' cabin. It is thought that about forty were lost, perhaps more. Only seventy or eighty are known to be saved.

While the fire was raging, the steamer J. S. Baldwin passed up and rescued sixty or seventy. These were landed at Rhinebeck, and thence proceeded home.

The boat and cargo are a total loss. The former was valued at $200,000, and is fully insured. No baggage was saved, and many escaped in their night clothes. The cargo consisted of hay, butter, stock, &c. The value is unknown.

The passengers were mostly from Hudson and Catskill. The river is being dragged, and the wreck searched for bodies, but much difficulty is experienced in finding them.

JOEL BEAM, of Hyde Park, had a leg broken, and ANDREW LOPER probably fatally injured by the fall of the smoke-stack this morning.

THE BALTIMORE NOMINATION.

Mr. Lincoln's Acceptance—Address of Gov. Dennison—The Platform—Its Indorsement by the President—Address of the National Union League—The President's Reply.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, June 9.

At 2:30 o'clock to-day the committee appointed yesterday by the National Union Convention at Baltimore to inform President LINCOLN of his nomination by that convention, reached the White House, when they were invited into the East Room, where the President was conversing with members of the delegation who had previously called upon him.

Gov. DENNISON, President of the convention and Chairman of said committee, then addressed the President as follows:

MR. PRESIDENT: The National Union Convention, which closed its sittings at Baltimore yesterday, appointed a committee, consisting of one from each State, with myself as Chairman, to inform you of your unanimous nomination by that convention for election to the office of President of the United States. That committee, I have the honor of now informing you, is present. On its behalf I have also the honor of presenting you with a copy of the resolutions or platform adopted by that convention, as expressive of its sense and of the sense of the loyal people of the country which it represents, of the principles and policy that should characterize the administration of the Government in the present condition of the country. I need not say to you, Sir, that the convention, in thus unanimously nominating you for reelection, but gave utterance to the almost universal voice of the loyal people of the country. To doubt of your triumphant election would be little short of abandoning the hope of a final suppression of the rebellion and the restoration of the Government of the insurgent States. Neither the convention nor those represented by that body entertained any doubt as to the final result, under your administration, sustained by the loyal people, and by our noble army and gallant navy. Neither did the convention, nor do this committee, doubt the speedy suppression of this most wicked and unprovoked rebellion.

[A copy of the resolutions was here handed to the President.]

I would add, Mr. President, that it would be the pleasure of the committee to communicate to you within a few days, through one of its most accomplished members, Mr. CURTIS, of New-York, by letter, more at length the circumstances under which you have been placed in nomination for the Presidency.

The President said:

MR. CHAIRMAN AND GENTLEMEN OF THE COMMITTEE: I will neither conceal my gratification, nor restrain the expression of my gratitude, that the Union people, through their convention, to the continued effort to save and advance the nation, have deemed me not unworthy to remain in my present position. I know no reason to doubt that I shall accept the nomination tendered; and yet, perhaps, I should not declare definitely before reading and considering what is called the platform. I will say now, however, that I approve the declaration in favor of so amending the Constitution as to prohibit Slavery throughout the nation. When the people in revolt, with the hundred days' explicit notice that they could within those days resume their allegiance without the overthrow of their institutions, and that they could not resume it afterward, elected to stand out, such an amendment of the Constitution as is now proposed became a fitting and necessary conclusion to the final success of the Union cause. Such alone can meet and cover all cavils. I now perceive its importance and embrace it. In the joint names of Liberty and Union let us labor to give it legal form and practical effect.

At the conclusion of the President's speech, all of the committee shook him cordially by the hand and offered their personal congratulations.

The members of the National Union League adjourned yesterday from Baltimore to this city and called upon the President this afternoon, by whom they were cordially received in the east room of the White House. The Chairman of the deputation spoke to the President as follows:

MR. PRESIDENT: I have the honor of introducing to you the representatives of the Union Leagues of the loyal States, to congratulate you upon your renomination, and to assure you that we will not fail at the polls to give you the support that your services in the past so highly deserve. We feel honored in doing this, for we are assured that we are aiding in reelecting to the proud position of President of the United States one so highly worthy of it, one among not the least of whose claims is that he was the emancipator of four millions of bondmen.

The President replied as follows:

GENTLEMEN: I can only say, in response to the remarks of your Chairman, that I am very grateful for the renewed confidence which has been accorded to me, both by the convention and by the National League. I am not insensible at all to the personal compliment there is in this, yet I do not allow myself to believe that any but a small portion of it is to be appropriated as a personal compliment. The convention and the nation, I am assured, are alike animated by a higher view of the interests of the country for the present and the great future, and that part I am entitled to appropriate as a compliment is only that part which I may lay hold of as being the opinion of the convention and of the League, that I am not unworthy to be intrusted with the place I have occupied for the last three years. I have not permitted myself, gentlemen, to conclude that I am the best man in the country; but I am reminded, in this connection, of a story of an old Dutch farmer, who remarked to a companion once that "it was not best to swap horses when crossing streams."

The prolonged laughter which followed this characteristic remark should have been heard. It was tumultuous.

FROM MISSOURI.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., June —, 1864.

While the attention of the country is directed toward active operations in Virginia, we in Missouri are solving the problem of the war for ourselves as best we may. Alternately threatened and alarmed by PRICE'S army, now in Arkansas, we are harrassed and worried to an extent almost pitiable, if it were not a little tinctured with the ridiculous. For, seriously, it is not probable that the Government will allow Missouri, which it cost so much to wrest from the armed hand of rebellion, to fall again a prey to the destroyer. It is essential that it should be held intact; but, even if PRICE should revisit its soil at the head of an invading army, there is no need for the ridiculous exhibitions of alarm and fear now made by the timid ones, who, after all, may be indulging in the wish that is father to the thought of PRICE'S coming. There are abundant evidences of the rebel intention to make another strike for the repossession of Missouri, and among them may be mentioned that contained in letters, intercepted or captured on their way to the relatives and friends of soldiers in the rebel armies in the Southwest. A recent batch of these captured near Rolla, Missouri, reveals the fact that PRICE'S command is well fed, clothed, armed and equipped; that the soldiers still entertain the greatest enthusiasm for him; and that he promises to lead them into Missouri this summer. From a large number of these, the following extracts are made in reference to the intended invasion, and are given that the original tone and spirit may be conveyed. Out of a thousand letters, not a single complaint is uttered, and the only sign of weariness with the war is seen in the occasionally expressed hope that it may end this year.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS IN A CAPTURED REBEL MAIL.

"There are a great many things that I would like to tell you by letter, but it is best to say nothing at this time. I have plenty of trust in the good Lord that the time is close at hand when we shall set our foot on Missouri soil once more, and call it our own.

WM. J. BASS, Lieut. Co. C,
Ninth Regt., Missouri Infantry,
Price's Division."

CAMP IN HAMPSTEAD COUNTY, Ark., March 10, 1864.

Another from Camden, Arkansas, of a more recent date says:

"Gen. PRICE is here and in command. Gen. HEBERT has gone to Richmond, and I suppose he will be assigned to duty somewhere. I do not care where, so it is not here. Our army is in fine spirits and good condition, and will do good service this season. The tale will be told in Fall. J. W. KIRTLAND."

BENJAMIN GOSLIN, writing from the same place, on the same date, says:

"'Old Pap' (Gen. PRICE) is with us, and he tells us that if we will stick to him he will take us to Missouri this Summer, and we will do that you know."

AMOS K. HULETT, writing March 29, from Camden, also mentions the fact of PRICE being in command and remarks:

"I saw the old fellow (PRICE) the other day and had a conversation with him. He told me that we have one more battle to fight and then we move immediately into Missouri, and when he goes he intends to remain."

THOMAS K. WALLACE writes his wife at the same time, and closes by saying:

"Old Grand-pap PRICE is in command of all the Missouri troops. He rode us a speech the other night and told us that he would take us to the Missouri River this Summer, if his men would stand up to him. A shout went up from our whole brigade, and a grand torch-light procession was formed. It was the finest sight I ever saw since I have been away from home. The soldiers are all as determined as they were at the first, for it is liberty or death with us all."

M. W. BUSTER, evidently an officer, and in command of the post of Springhill, Ark., writes his wife by the same mail, and, although he is extremely cautious and guarded in his expressions, it is quite evident that he knows a good deal of the purposes and intentions of the rebels touching Missouri, this Summer. In fact, the entire mail is full of just such expressions as those given above. Every officer and soldier speaks in the same hopeful strain; and it is left only to time to determine what the offspring of this hope will be. One thing is certain: if the Government desires the safety of Missouri, more troops must be placed at the disposal of the commanding General. The State militia are necessarily an ineffective and, so far as active service is concerned, an unreliable organization; they cannot be depended upon like troops raised for the war; yet they form the great body of the soldiery in Missouri at the present time.

The change of commanders in the Northern District has proved to be of the utmost value to the progress of reconstruction. When Gen. GUITAR was in command there, the Conservatives, so called, controlled the district, and by their double-dealing fostered and kept alive a spirit of hostility to the Government which encouraged guerrillas in their nefarious practices; and, as a matter of course, men who were at all demonstrative in their devotion or attachment to the Government were harrassed, robbed and frequently murdered. This state of affairs continued up to within the past two months, when the necessity of a change urged itself upon Gen. ROSECRANS and Gen. GUITAR was relieved by Gen. CLINTON B. FISK, a man of the most decided national principles and unflinching loyalty. He made his headquarters at St. Joseph, and inaugurated his administration by discharging from arrest a number of undoubted loyal men, whom the Conservatives had managed to have incarcerated upon one pretext and another, simply to get them out of the way. A healthy political tone was immediately imparted to the district—loyal men were encouraged, and the doubt and alarm in which they and their families continually dwelt gave place to courage and confidence. Guerrilla outrages, although not at an end, were of less frequent occurrance, and the peaceful pursuits of life were resumed. Farmers repaired to the fields once more, and the result is that flourishing crops give promise of an abundant harvest. When guerrillas were found they were summarily punished, that is, shot dead, and the effect was magical; for, wherever one of these ruffians met the just punishment of the bullet, his confreres shunned it with the scrupulousness of religion. And thus North Missouri has been in a great measure reclaimed from rebel rule. Pity that the same cannot be said of the whole State.

It may be safely set down, however, that except in the counties bordering on Dixie, demonstrative rebellion is not permitted. Rebel sympathizers have come pretty generally to understand that they cannot indulge in disloyal expressions with impunity, and it is being demonstrated daily that there is little safety for those who are acting covertly with traitors. The arrest and incarceration in the Gratiot-street military prison of CHARLES L. HUNT, the Consul of Belgium in this city, and the positive refusal of bail bonds in his case, shows how determined the Provost-Marshal-General is to make traitors feel the weight of the hand they have invoked. Mr. HUNT is under arrest for treasonable practices, and although half a million of dollars have been tendered on his bail-bond, Col. SANDERSON refused to release him. It is altogether probable that the knowledge of HUNT'S treason by Mr. LINCOLN, caused the revocation of his consulate, which took place only a few days previous to his arrest. The gentleman is a life-long resident of St. Louis, and has at his command an amount of wealth and influence second to none, but neither have sufficed to procure for him a temporary immunity from the restraint of military law. This arrest has had a most salutary effect in St. Louis. Wealthy and influential rebel sympathizers are more chary in their expressions, and, although they send up a faint howl at the arbitrary character of the arrest, they are sufficiently cautious not to overstep the bounds set by precedence for free speech.

The "Daily Old Piute."

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

"Piute" is a corruption of Pah Ute—the name of a nearly extinct tribe of Indians, whose range was west of the Rocky Mountains. This statement explains the origin of the name of The Daily Old Piute, about which you inquire in your Sunday's issue. It would be more difficult to justify the taste which selects such a designation for a journal, even in the semi-civilized region of Nevada Territory.

QUOD.

"A Voice From Texas."

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I saw in your issue of June 4 an article headed as above from a loyal Texan who is now in the rebel army. I was struck with the true history he gave of the condition and affairs of that State. I know not who your correspondent is, but my nine years' experience in the South, five years in Texas, and ten months in a sickly rebel prison at Little Rock, Ark., enables me to vouch for the truth of his assertions. I was living in the north part of Texas when the rebellion broke out, and, with my loyal friends, did all in our power to oppose it. For this we were often threatened to be hung. Stump speakers would guarantee that a lady's thimble would hold all the blood that would be shed caused by secession. A rebel convention met at Austin (without being sent by the people) for the purpose of declaring the State out of the Union, and was only prevented by Gov. "SAM." HOUSTON, who declared that it should be left to the vote of the people. All the northern counties gave a large majority in favor of the Union. But in some of the southern counties the rebels had their polls guarded by armed men, who swore to murder any man who would attempt to vote in favor of the Union. They were not even satisfied with this, but compelled every loyal man, at the point of the bayonet, to vote in favor of secession! Texas was reported to have gone out of the Union by ten thousand majority.

The State of Louisiana never did go out of the Union, although the vote was taken and the State was reported to have gone out by only a small majority. The New-Orleans Picayune published the full returns of the vote, which showed that the State gave a small majority in favor of the Union. The rebel papers did not pretend to deny this fact, but reprimanded the Picayune for making the exposition.

In the Summer of 1860 many towns were destroyed by fire in Texas, supposed to be the work of Abolition incendiaries. But after the war broke out it was ascertained for a fact that the towns burned were set on fire by some of the ringleaders of the rebel party or the purpose of exciting the people against the North and uniting them in the rebellion.

In 1862 Arkansas and Texas were declared under martial law, and we to the loyal people, for now their troubles had just begun! Any man accused of disloyalty to the Confederacy would be arrested and tried before the Provost-Marshal and hung, in many cases in less than six hours from the time of their arrest! In the month of October, 1862, over one hundred of my loyal friends suffered in this way. Twenty-two were hung at the same time, one morning before breakfast, without the least shadow of a trial, by order of JAMES YOUNG, a captain in the rebel army. Several of the loyal men attempted to make their escape to the Federal lines. Some succeeded, but many were captured and shot down or hung like dogs? Your correspondent was followed for three hundred and fifty miles, and after many hairbreadth escapes, succeeded in passing nearly all the rebel pickets in the north part of Arkansas, when he was arrested by a rebel soldier on suspicion of attempting to escape to the "enemy's country," as they termed it, and sent to Little Rock under a strong guard, and confined in an iron cage twelve feet square, inside of a filthy and sickly prison; but I was not alone. Several other Union men were there before me, part of whom were taken out and executed. Others died of diseases contracted in prison; and others were taken out and forced into the rebel army; and still others were suffered to remain there without any trial or investigation, kept in bitter suspense, not knowing what hour a guard might call for some of us to accompany them to the suburbs of the city where many a loyal man has been sent to his "long home." Wives of loyal men who had been arrested on suspicion and torn from their families, would come to Little Rock and visit the prison in search of their husbands, and in many cases find that they had either been executed or died in prison! Such agony and groans I have witnessed from those heart-broken widows are enough to freeze the blood in one's veins! The following is a true copy of an article that appeared in the Arkansas Patriot last Summer, which I brought with me at a great risk, when I made my escape into the Union lines. Complaining of the martial law, it says:

"In the retreat of Gen. THOMAS C. HINMAN last Winter from Cane Hill to Little Rock, as one of his men was passing by his own house, his little girl ran out and told him that her mother was dying. Without permission he left the command, went in his house, and saw his wife die soon after. He left her body lying there, and hastened back to his command, hoping to gain permission to return and bury his wife and make some disposition of his children. But instead, he was arrested, turned over to the Provost Guard, and shot the next morning."

I could say a great deal more, but at present I have no time. A true history of this rebellion in the South is one of blood, barbarism and savage ferocity, which perhaps can never be writ'en.

I am, most respectfully,

FRED. W. SUMNER.

Obituary.

LIEUT.-COL. PERRY.

Among the killed at the battle near Cold Harbor, Va., was Lieut.-Col. EDGAR PERRY, of the One Hundred and Thirty-ninth N. Y. S. V., Brooklyn. He went out with his regiment as Captain of Company F. In July last he was promoted to the position he held at the time of his death. Lieut.-Col. PERRY was the son of the late ELY PERRY, of Orange County, of this State, and nephew of Hon. WILLIAM E. HASBROOK, of Newburgh, and of Col. JAMES H. PERRY, of the Forty-eighth Brooklyn, who was killed at Fort Pulaski, Georgia. At the time of Lieut.-Col. PERRY'S death, he was in command of his regiment, the Colonel being absent therefrom in consequence of sickness. A brave and promising young officer and patriot has fallen while nobly fighting in the cause of a country he dearly loved. And although in the prime of life, hope and usefulness, he fell as a brave soldier delights to fall, with his face to the foe fighting in defence of a holy cause and of his native land. C. H. M.

COUNT HACKE—BARON VON STEUBEN.

Among the victims of this rebellion we have to lament the loss of the brave and accomplished Count HACKE. A native of Prussia, and in the Prussian army, he obtained a furlough, and coming to this country, procured a commission as First Lieutenant in the Seventh (Steuben) New-York Volunteers. He served in that regiment till its term of service expired, and subsequently procured a commission as First Lieutenant in the Fifty-second New-York Volunteers, HANCOCK'S corps. He fell in the defence of the Union while leading a charge at the head of his company, in the battle of the Wilderness, on the 10th of May. His friend and countryman, the gallant Baron VON STEUBEN, also in the same regiment, was inconsolable on hearing of his fall, and endeavored to get some message from him to his family, but without success; he was speechless, and soon afterward expired. Two days afterward the brave Baron VON STEUBEN himself was killed. Another brave soldier gone to his rest.

In HERKIMER, Count HACKE, the country has lost a brave and gallant soldier, while his kind and genial heart, modest and unassuming manners endeared him to the many friends who have now to deplore his loss. POPE was a favorite poet of his, and one verse in particular in his "Ode to Solitude":

"Thus let me live, unseen, unknown—
Thus unlamented let me die;
Steal from the world, and not a stone
Tell where I lie."

The 1st or part was singularly fulfilled, for not long after his death the woods in which he fell were consumed by fire, and no traces of his remains could be discovered. But his epitaph is written in the hearts of a brave people, as a brave and true soldier who fell in battle for a noble cause. Honor the brave. F.

COL. DRAKE, OF THE ONE HUNDRED AND TWELFTH NEW-YORK VOLUNTEERS.

Col. DRAKE, of the One Hundred and Twelfth New-York Volunteers, who was killed in the action at Cold Harbor on June 2, was about 38 years of age, and was born and brought up in Herkimer Co., N. Y., whence he removed to Wisconsin and was for sometime engaged in mercantile pursuits. Subsequent to this he removed to Rochester, N. Y., and commenced the preparatory studies for a collegiate course. He entered the Madison University at the opening of the Academic year in 1849, under the chancellorship of Hon. IRA HARRIS, LL. D., now a Senator of the United States. Col. DRAKE, after an academic course, was admitted to the degree of A. B., at the University, in 1852. He then mastered a thorough course in theology, and at the outbreak of the rebellion was occupying the pulpit of the Baptist Church, at Westfield, in this county, but he volunteered in the Forty-ninth Regiment New-York Volunteers, and was elected Captain. He served about one year in the Forty-ninth, being with McCLELLAN in the disasters of the Peninsular campaign, and was frequently temporarily in command of the regiment. Upon the organization of the One Hundred and Twelfth New-York, accepted the colonelcy of the regiment. In the command of this regiment he served with credit in the long siege of Suffolk, in 1862-63, in the siege of Charleston, under Gen. GILLMORE; in the recent Florida campaign, and when the One Hundred and Twelfth with other regiments, was ordered to BUTLER'S Department, Fort Monroe. Col. DRAKE was appointed to command the Second Brigade, Third Division, Tenth Army Corps, which participated in the late attack upon Richmond, via the James River under Gen. BUTLER. Col. DRAKE leaves a wife and family at Westfield.

The Citizens of New-York and Rev. Dr. McClintock.

The following correspondence has passed between a number of the leading citizens of New-York and Rev. Dr. MCCLINTOCK:

NEW-YORK, June 1, 1864.

REV. DR. MCCLINTOCK—Dear Sir: We are desirous, in common with many others, of our countrymen, to offer you some suitable recognition of the very great service you have rendered the cause of liberty and the Union during your residence in Europe.

We have observed with pride and pleasure your zealous and effective labors, in enlightening public sentiment abroad in regard to the principles involved in the great contest, now, as we hope, happily drawing to its close, and we cannot doubt that the result of those labors will be manifest for many years to come in a much better understanding of our Government and people on the part of the nations of the old world.

We very respectfully invite you to accept the compliment of a dinner at some time to suit your convenience, at which we can exchange congratulations upon the improved condition and hopeful prospect of public affairs.

To Messrs. Daniel Drew, E. C. Cowdin, Hiram Barney, Thurlow Weed, William E. Dodge, W. C. Bryant, and others.

GENTLEMEN: You do me too much honor. My humble services in behalf of "Liberty and the Union," do not deserve so signal a recognition. My post of duty abroad happened to offer me certain facilities of action which I made use of to the best of my ability. That is all.

But I thank you, nevertheless, most cordially for your words of praise. They mark not merely your personal kindness to myself, but also your patriotic appreciation of all work done, in the spirit of Christian loyalty, for the cause of our country, which is the cause of the human race.

It would give me very great pleasure to "exchange congratulations" with you. But I am just recovering from a serious illness, and cannot bear the excitement which a reunion, such as you kindly propose, must occasion. Very truly yours,

JOHN MCCLINTOCK.

No. 289 FOURTH-AVENUE, June 4, 1864.

Gerrit Smith on the Presidency.

A letter from GERRIT SMITH to Mrs. E. CADY STANTON, dated Peterboro, June 7, says:

My concern whether it shall be LINCOLN, or FREMONT, or CHASE, or BUTLER, or GRANT, who shall reach the Presidential chair, is comparatively very slight. But my concern to keep out of it a man who would make any other terms with the rebels than their absolute submission, is overwhelming. For any other terms would not only destroy our nation, but lessen the sacredness of nationality everywhere, and sadly damage the most precious interests of all mankind.

Since the rebellion broke out I have been nothing but an Anti-Rebellion man. So unconditionally have I gone for putting it down unconditionally, as to make no stipulations in behalf of my most cherished objects and dearest interests. And so shall I continue to go. I love the Anti-Slavery cause. Nevertheless I would serve the rebellion put down at whatever necessary expense to that cause. I love the Constitution, and deprecate the making of any even the slightest change in it. Nevertheless I make infinitely less account of saving it than of destroying the rebellion. I love my country. But sooner than see her compromise with the rebels I would see her exhaust herself and perish in her endeavors to defeat their crime—the greatest crime of all the ages and all the world. I do not forget that many of my old fellow Abolitionists accuse me of having been unfaithful to the Anti-Slavery cause during the rebellion. My first answer to them is—that to help suppress the rebellion is the duty which stands nearest to me: and my second answer—that in no way so well as in suppressing it can the Anti-Slavery cause of any other good cause be promoted. There is not a good cause on earth that is not an enemy in the unmixed and mighty wickedness of this rebellion.

Another instance of meddling with things before their time is this slapping of the face of France with the "Monroe Doctrine." I was about to say that doing so serves but to provoke the enmity of France. There is, however, one thing more which it provokes—and that is the ridicule of the world. For whilst the rebels are still at the throat of the nation, and may even be at her funeral, to be resolving that we will protect the whole Western Continent from the designs of the whole Eastern Continent, is as ludicrous a piece of impotent bravado as ever the world laughed at.

And still another instance of our foolish prematureness is the big words in which we threaten to punish the leaders of the rebellion. It would be time enough for these big words when we had subdued the rebellion and captured the leaders. In the meantime there should be only big blows. Moreover, if we shall succeed in getting these leaders into our hands, it will be a question for the gravest consideration whether we should not beg their pardon instead of punishing them. What was it that stirred up the rebellion? The spirit of Slavery. That alone is the spirit by means of which Southern treason can build up a fire in the Southern heart whose flames shall burst out in rebellion. Slavery gone from the South, and there will never more be rebellions there to disturb the peace and prosperity in which North and South will ever after dwell together.

Naval Movements.

PROGRESS OF THE COURT-MARTIAL ON "SWINDLING CONTRACTORS."

Every day for the last five or six weeks a naval court-martial has been in session in this City, for the purpose of investigating certain charges made against contractors for the Navy Department. For many days the case of Mr. SCOFIELD has been before the court. The publication of its proceedings is not permitted. The court, it is rumored, has thus far failed to establish direct fraud to any considerable extent. Enormous profits are alleged to have been exacted, but an important witness informed our reporter yesterday that larger profits are every day made in "honest trade" with the public. A complete record of the proceedings of the court is in course of preparation for print, but the precise channel of its publicity has not yet been designated.

THE STEAM FRIGATE NIAGARA.

This splendid ship now lies at anchor in Buttermilk Channel, between New-York and Brooklyn. Her size and unwieldiness rendered her too troublesome at the Navy-yard, whence she was dispatched.

BRITISH OPINION OF OUR IRON-CLADS.

It is rumored that some officers of the British Navy, who were sent here by the British Admiralty, to report on our progress in iron-clads, have recommended the following features for adoption in the Royal Navy:

First. The Ericsson turrets so called.

Secondly. The compressor used in working our 15 and 11-inch guns.

Thirdly. The new ventilating system of the monitors, and many minor details.

From the same authority we learn that it is likely that within a month or two, five armored vessels will be commenced in the Government dockyards in England, all partially modeled on the American plan. It may be mentioned, incidentally, that there are now in this country nearly 60 officers of European navies, who are detailed especially to watch and report our discoveries and progress in naval architecture.

But they continued legally to exercise the duties of the office under their appointment until the 5th of May, when the applicants were appointed.

2. I cannot entertain a doubt that the appointment of the applicants to succeed to the office by the Comptroller was regular and proper. The learned counsel for the contestants, while they conceded that their term of office had expired, and that the law contempl

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

The news from the Army of the Potomac presents no new feature to-day. The flag of truce has been arranged satisfactorily, and the dead and wounded were being removed from the field. The railroad from the White House to the army is in process of repair, and the mails for the army are now regularly received.

We have intelligence from Kentucky by way of Cincinnati, that a force of 700 cavalry, supposed to be MORGAN'S, entered Paris on Wednesday evening; that one band is near Falmouth, on the Kentucky Central Railroad, another at Williamstown, within thirty miles of Cincinnati, and a third twelve miles east of Lexington. Other squads are reported at Crab Orchard and Stamford. They burnt a warehouse at Cynthiana on Wednesday, and had, at the date of the report, (Thursday,) possession of Paris, Georgetown, Cynthiana and Williamstown.

The United States supply steamer Massachusetts, Lieut. WEST, from the South Atlantic squadron, which arrived at Philadelphia yesterday, brings news of the capture of the United States steamer Water Witch, on the 3d of June, by eight armed launches from the rebel Fort McAllister. One of the crew who made his escape by jumping over the bow, brings the information. He says the officers and crew of the Water Witch made desperate resistance, but were overpowered by superior numbers, and after an hour's fight captured. The Water Witch is a regular navy built side-wheel gun-boat of about 256 tons, rigged as a topsail schooner, and carries five guns.

JOHN MORGAN'S rebel gang are said to be near Falmouth, on the Kentucky Railroad, and at Williamstown, on the pike, thirty miles from Cincinnati. The water station and large warehouse at Cynthiana they have burned and are now said to be in possession of Paris, Georgetown, Cynthiana and Williamstown.

CONGRESS.

In the Senate, yesterday, a bill was reported to facilitate telegraphic communication between the eastern and western continents. The bill to establish certain new military and post roads in Michigan, was passed as amended. Mr. DAVIS offered a joint resolution to restore peace among the people of the United States. Objection being made to its reception, the Chair decided that it was not in order. Another Committee of Conference was appointed to meet that of the House on the Consular and Diplomatic Appropriation Bill. The bill relative to commercial intercourse between the loyal and disloyal States, was then taken up for consideration. The bill to prohibit the exemption of persons from military duty by reason of the payment of money, was then taken up. An amendment was offered that all calls for drafts hereafter may be for a term not exceeding one year; that the act shall not, however, extend to any district or sub-district where the quota on previous calls has not been filled. That no person drafted on further calls shall be liable to be again drafted until the present enrollment shall be exhausted, and that when men are furnished by any district in excess of the quota on calls previously made, the term of service of each man shall be considered and allowed to said district in calls hereafter made. After a lengthy argument the first branch of the amendment was adopted by a vote of 23 against 17, the remaining sections of the amendment were adopted. An amendment was offered by Mr. WILSON, but before discussing it the House adjourned.

In the House of Representatives a bill was reported providing for the construction of a railroad between New-York and Washington, and to constitute the same a public highway and military road and postal route. No action was taken. The Bankrupt Bill was brought up and rejected by a vote of 64 yeas to 65 nays. A bill was passed providing heavy penalties for taking an excess of passengers on ships and steamers. A bill was passed providing that goods, trunks, carpet-bags, baggage, &c., be sealed, &c; in the United States as in Europe, and for the increase of Revenue Inspectors to sixty in number, mainly on the Canada frontier. The Senate bill regulating foreign and coasting trade on the northern, northeastern and northwestern frontier, was passed. The Senate joint resolution, repealing the act for the relief of E. F. and SAMUEL A. WOOD, authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to issue to them duplicate bonds for the Oregon war debt, amounting to over $7,000, claimed to have been lost in the steamer Golden Gate, was passed, after which the House adjourned.

GENERAL NEWS.

The Board of Councilmen had no quorum, yesterday, and adjourned to Monday, at 2 P. M.

MICHAEL JAMESON, a lad 14 years of age, and WM. WOOD, aged 15 years, were arrested yesterday by the Sixth Precinct Police. Young JAMESON, on his own confession, has been in the habit, almost daily for many months, of robbing his employers, Messrs. LATHROP, LUDDINGTON & Co., of large quantities of gloves, hosiery, needles, &c. WOOD has also confessed that for a long time he has practiced stealing the goods of Messrs. BENTON, WILLIS & Co., No. 84 Leonard-street. WOOD was in the employ of another party, who occupied the same building as the Messrs. BENTON & WILLIS. His time for taking valuable articles was in the morning, immediately after the porter opened the store, and while the latter was engaged in sweeping the premises. A man named WM. SIMPSON, of No. 57 Centre, has been arrested and committed to the Tombs as a receiver of the goods obtained by these extensive thefts. Many hundred dollars worth have been recovered, and the police believe they will succeed in finding much more.

A committee from the Baltimore National Convention yesterday waited on President LINCOLN and informed him of his nomination by that body. The President, in a very short speech, expressed his thanks and accepted the nomination. A committee of the National Union League subsequently waited on His Excellency to congratulate him upon his renomination.

The Chairman of the Committee on Commerce of the United States Senate has forwarded to Secretary SEWARD a copy of a memorial received from PERRY MCD. COLLINS, relative to the establishment of an intercontinental telegraph; which has called forth from Mr. SEWARD a very elaborate reply. We publish it in another column. It is a matter of great interest.

Gen. BUELL having been mustered out of the volunteer service, for refusing to accept a command under Maj.-Gen. CANBY, has now resigned his Colonelcy in the regular army.

Another sad catastrophe occurred on the Hudson River on Wednesday evening. The steamer Berkshire while on her way from Hudson to New-York, and when a few miles below Rondout was burned to the water's edge in a few moments. She was run ashore as soon as possible, and most of the passengers saved. Between 30 and 40, however, were lost. The freight and live stock were all destroyed.

A correspondent of the Philadelphia Inquirer was, on the 7th inst., by order of Gen. MEADE, put without the lines of the Army of the Potomac, not to be permitted to return. The reason given is, that he published a libelous statement on the Commanding-General of the army, calculated to impair the confidence of the men in their commanding officer.

The steamship Edinburgh, which arrived at this port yesterday, left Liverpool on the 27th ult. and Queenstown on the 28th. Her news is anticipated. The Edinburgh brings between 700 and 800 passengers.

It is said that many of the light draft monitors now in course of construction at Boston, will not float when their stores and crew are on board; also that another was laid aground after she was launched to prevent her sinking, and that another was not more than three inches out of water. Commodore GREGORY, it is understood, will examine into the matter and see if anything can be done to remedy these miscalculations.

An erroneous statement has appeared in several papers to the effect that Col. WINSLOW, of the Second Duryee Zouaves, was killed. As was stated in the TIMES of yesterday, Col. WINSLOW was seriously injured. His father, Dr. GORDON WINSLOW, was lost overboard from the Sanitary Commission steamboat Ripley, while bringing his wounded son from White House to Washington. Col. WINSLOW is said to be doing well.

The pressure on our columns precludes our giving a full report of the final day's proceedings at the Paterson Racing Meeting. We therefore merely give the summaries. The full report will appear on Saturday. The Sequel Stakes was won by Kentucky in 4:02¾, beating the Eclipse colt and Relief easily. The Post Stake by Fleetwing, and the All-aged Premium by Aldebaran. The track, owing to the storm, was remarkably heavy, but the attendance was large and enthusiastic.

It is reported that the officers sent here by the British Admiralty to report on the progress of American iron-clads have included in their recommendations, the adoption by their Government of the Ericsson turrets; the compressor used in the working of the 15 and 11-inch guns, and the new ventilating system of the monitors.

The Chicago Tribune calls the letter in which FREMONT accepts the nomination of the Cleveland Convention, "the last will and testament of the late J. C. FREMONT."

A meeting was held at Oswego last Monday, to take the preliminary steps to build a railroad between Lewiston and Troy, a distance of 294 miles.

The Secretary of the Treasury, on his visit to this City, has favorably entertained certain offers for a loan from England, Holland and Germany, and he returns to Washington with the purpose of accepting them.

The Stock Market was firmer yesterday afternoon. Money in good supply. The speculators in Gold, some of whom have large wagers on 200 ₩ cent. ran up the price to 196@198 ₩ cent.

Influenced by the remarkable rise in Gold and Sterling Exchange, yesterday, prices of Flour, Wheat and Cotton advanced materially, with an active business. Wool, Leather, Tobacco, and Petroleum were in more request and quite buoyant. Transactions in Groceries, Provisions, Metals, Oils, Hay, Seeds, and Spices, were moderate at irregular figures. The freight engagements were light, and rates depressed.

The Platform of the Union Party.

The Union party, now for the first time meeting in National Convention, for the first time gives its combined sanction, and an authoritative form, to its tenets. Its series of resolutions embrace nothing novel; they are but the reassertion of principles which have already shaped the character and policy of the Administration; and yet their clear and systematic statement, accredited by the unanimous assent of the party in convention assembled, is an important act, which will pass into history.

The prime characteristic of the resolutions is their thoroughness. Never before was this exhibited in any national convention of any great party. Democratic, Whig, American, Republican—they all, in greater or less degree, were subject to the necessity of dealing largely in carefully qualified and restricted language. In respect to the great question of Slavery, the difference between them was only a difference where the limitation should be made. The Republican platform, in which the line against Slavery was drawn the farthest, yet exhibited special solicitude in its framers to preserve intact the inviolability of Slavery in the States. In fact, the shaping of a political platform, so as to supply a party with a distinctive and peculiar foothold, and at the same time not disturb the conservative and compromising spirit of the people, has always been a work of high art, requiring consummate political experience and skill. Among the political débris of the past can be found specimens of party platform joinery, so exactly set and fitted, that the mosaics turned up from Pompeii are but mere botchwork in comparison. As you go back to look at them, you are almost lost in wonder that political craft could have ever attained such nicety of measurement. The present platform shows nothing of the kind. Without a curve or an indentation, or a dovetail, or any balancing or adjusting method of any sort, it stands out in simple square outlines, every plank and every line running straight through from one end to the other, without break or deviation.

Upon the matter of the rebellion, a resolution sets forth an unqualified determination to accept of nothing short of unconditional surrender. Upon the manner of prosecuting the war, a resolution declares for the utmost possible vigor. Upon Slavery, a resolution demands its utter and complete extirpation from the soil of the Republic. Upon the policy of employing negro soldiers, a resolution declares its absolute approval. Upon the question of protecting these soldiers, a resolution calls for the full protection of the laws of war. Upon the paramount authority of the Constitution and laws of the United States, and the necessity of bringing rebels and traitors to due punishment, none but positive terms are employed. Upon the Monroe [doctrine, the encouragement of foreign immigration, the maintenance of the national credit and currency, the speedy construction of the Pacific Railroad, and every other important point, the doctrine is thorough, and the language explicit.

The great Union party is fortunate in being thus able to plant itself upon a basis so completely consistent with every loyal obligation and every principle of justice and truth. It has been enabled, by the irresistible course of events, to get clear of the old compromising and temporising necessities. It has reached the fullness of time where political expediency and moral right completely coincide, and where matured public opinion is prepared to meet and steadily support it. It can now set forth its great principles with the strongest emphasis, and keep rigidly to their extreme logical consequences, without danger of estranging from the war any portion of the people who have any heart in it at all. The very radicalism of these resolutions, which two years ago would have been a fatal reproach against them, is now their most potent recommendation.

The Copperheads will have a very different task of it when they come to frame their platform. Instead of a few consistent, solid, stable principles, they have got to join together the most diverse and incongruous dogmas and policies. Every sort of opinion respecting the right of making war upon rebellion, respecting the expediency of continuing the war, respecting the policy of offering terms to the rebels, and the kind of terms that should be offered, respecting the future treatment of Slavery, will have its exponents in the Chicago Convention. To assimilate these opinions will be impossible. There will be no alternative but either to make a platform without any definite principles and policy, or to make such a one as cannot be sustained by more than a fraction of the party, and thus be a cause of party division instead of party union. We don't doubt that a vast deal of ingenuity will be exercised to contrive a basis on which all can make shift to stand, and quite likely it may be accomplished. A common hatred is always a strong stimulant to coöperation, and all these varieties of Copperheads, if they agree in nothing else, most certainly are of one feeling against President LINCOLN. Perhaps they will all consent to resolutions of any conceivable shape, that may afford a chance, or something they can imagine to be a chance, of defeating their common enemy. We await with a good deal of curiosity their action in this matter. But it is curiosity unmingled with the slightest apprehension. Whether they unite or divide, make one platform or a dozen, is all the same. No earthly device can prevent the vast majority of the people from pronouncing resolutely and decisively in favor of the principles and the nominations just put forth by the great loyal convention at Baltimore. That ratification by the people is as sure as their national spirit is indestructible.

The Lessons of War.

Our correspondent with the Ninth Army Corps remarked, in a recent letter, that the rebel sharpshooters were superior to ours, and did more injury. He attributed their superiority to the greater familiarity with the rifle of the Southern population, and their more thorough acquaintance with woodcraft. The great number of officers killed on our side, and many of them of high rank, makes this view of Southern superiority with the rifle the more probable. And yet, if it be the fact, there is no excuse for any Northern inferiority at this stage of the war. It is well understood that good rifle shooting is as much a matter of science and training as good artillery firing. A thoroughly expert rifleman can be manufactured almost as surely as the rifle itself. He can learn to shoot with remarkable accuracy by rigidly following certain rules, almost without firing a shot. Regiments of men from our cities, who had never seen a rifle, could be trained so as to shoot with the precision of the most practiced Kentucky hunter.

Two years ago we heard much of the regiments of riflemen, selected from the "picked shots" of the North and West. These are probably still serving, but we hear little of their exploits, and we fear that of late, training with the rifle or at target practice has been neglected. Our men, as has generally been remarked, fire too high with the musket and do not seem very effective with the rifle. It is a murderous business at the best, this picking off officers and men by riflemen, safely ensconced in trees or hidden among rocks, but if one side does it the other must. We must have a plenty of hunters and backwoodsmen in our ranks, who would make most troublesome skirmishers, and who have had a life practice with the rifle and in woodcraft. It is to be hoped that this experience will be put to use. There is no reason why we should not have many such regiments of sharpshooters as our famous "Bucktails" of Pennsylvania, who, with their repeating rifles, have made themselves the terror of the rebel army.

In the beginning of the war, it will be remembered that we were also peculiarly behind hand in cavalry, and the Virginia "black horsemen" and the Stewart raiders were supposed to be able to sweep everything before them. The Southerners were a population far more used to the saddle than our own, and they made the most of their advantage. We ventured at the time to predict that as good a cavalry could be manufactured from our Northern and Western men as any in the world; for the experience of the French, the most unequestrian population in Europe, showed that training could make the best cavalry out of persons never accustomed to the horse.

The training of three years now tells, and we behold a magnificent body of Federal cavalry, against whom there is nothing in the whole rebel cavalry service that can stand in fight. We have had four or five large cavalry battles since the opening of May, and a hundred minor cavalry fights, and our horsemen always drive the rebel cavalry wherever they are met. Something of this is undoubtedly due to our better forage and food, giving heavier weight to both horses and men, and something to the superior arms of the Northerners, but mostly it is the result of training and discipline.

So it will be with every military branch or operation in which we were deficient. We of the North learn from our failures. We take lessons from our enemies. The Southerners seemed in the beginning to excel us in the attack, and to be always first in the onset. This was attributed to Southern ardor, as opposed to Northern phlegm. We have always believed, that under proper Generals, no troops in the world could excel the men of the Free States in the fire of their assault. They have the same blood with those who charged at Naseby and broke the force of the cavaliers on so many bloody fields. The experience of the past year shows that our most glorious victories have been won by the most daring onsets. The heights "above the clouds," near Chattanooga, were carried by storm—probably the most perilous and venturesome assault by a large body of men on record. HANCOCK'S victory in the battle of Spottsylvania—one of the most complete in the war—was gained at the point of the bayonet and with clubbed muskets, by an assault unequaled in rush and fire. GRANT is evidently a General who trusts much in the offensive. The McClellan policy is past with our army, and we now discover that our Northern men have quite as much fire and enthusiasm for an onset as the Southern.

So we learn slowly yet surely. LEE'S peculiar tactics are met by an equal skill, educated in the war. Each day teaches us a new resource in the ingenuity, the enthusiasm and the force of our people. We have learned war as we have learned the arts of peace; and we shall, in the end, by sheer pertinacity, by headwork and by determination, gain the great result of war—the utter defeat of our enemy. The results to the world will be deeply important. From a manufacturing and agricultural nation, accustomed to peace, we shall emerge a first-class military Power, with all the gigantic and expensive modern machinery of destruction, with immense armies of veteran soldiers as inured to battles as the "Old Guard" of NAPOLEON, and the martial passion fully aflame in the people. What will be the effects of all this we need, not now seek to foreknow.

THE KENTUCKY RAID.—It would seem that JOHN MORGAN is again in Kentucky, and has gotten as far up as Paris, Bourbon County, and even farther. We heard of MORGAN a short time since as commanding a division of infantry in JOHNSTON'S army, but he must have got tired of that very quickly, if this really be him in Kentucky. We do not know by what route he got into the State, nor exactly where he came from, but he must have passed through some one of the gaps of the Cumberland Mountains.

The object of this raid is of course to get over to the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, and cut the communications of Gen. SHERMAN, now operating in Georgia. Whether he be able to effect this will depend, in great measure, upon the vigilance and courage of the hundred days' men from the Western States, who are now guarding that line. We suppose this matter will be very promptly attended to. Fortunately, there is a large stock of supplies at Chattanooga and Nashville, so that the temporary cutting of the railroad will by no means necessitate the retreat of Gen. SHERMAN. The rebels have been boasting very loudly that Jo. JOHNSTON had SHERMAN'S army "just where he wanted it;" but it now seems that, having effected that end, he is anxious to have it somewhere else. The public are doubtless astonished at the long delay of SHERMAN after he had got so near to Atlanta. The cause of the delay is not apparent at this distance.

It is quite probable, however, that the magnitude of this new Kentucky invasion is greatly exaggerated. There have been a great many little raids there during the last two years, which the telegraph has enlarged to ridiculous proportions.

RECRUITING—NECESSITY FOR ACTION.—The County Volunteer Committee of the Board of Supervisors are understood to have bounty funds on hand to the amount of $600,000 or more. In view of the message of the President, yesterday, laid before Congress, recommending the repeal of the three hundred dollar exemption clause, is it not time to consider how this unexpended sum can be turned to practical account? The committee, it is true, have already done no common service to the State; but the exigences of the hour demand even a further tax on their time and their energies. The public, while acknowledging the debt they owe the committee, feel satisfied that the members are not weary in well-doing, and that they may reckon on the business of recruiting being commenced anew with the same judicious energy and the same successful results as marked the admirable arrangements under which the last quota of New-York was filled.

Gen. Carey in Brooklyn.

Gen. S. F. CAREY, of Cincinnati, addressed a large and enthusiastic assemblage at the Central Club Rooms in Brooklyn, last night, in support of the Union nominations—LINCOLN and JOHNSON—for the Presidency and Vice Presidency. His speech was replete with chaste wit, pungent sarcasm, and was both powerful and effective.

Gen. C. is one of the most able and eloquent champions of the Union cause in America, a zealous and persistent worker, and is said to have rendered more valuable service to the Union cause upon the stump than any man in the West. We learn that he will probably be the Union nominee for Congress in the Second District in Ohio, now misrepresented by ALEX. LONG, one of the most objectionable members of the peace faction of the present Congress.

The election of such men as Gen. CAREY will do much toward elevating the character of our National Legislature.

The Great Billiard Match.

KAVANAGH THE WINNER BY 75 POINTS.

An immense audience assembled at the Hippotheatron to witness the match between WM. GOLDTHWAITE and DUDLEY KAVANAGH for the championship of America. It proved one of the best contested games ever played. GOLDTHWAITE took the lead, and at one time was over 300 points ahead; but KAVANAGH'S unrivaled skill made him again a winner in 88 innings, with 75 points to spare. Highest runs, KAVANAGH, 156, 126, 120 and 118; GOLDTHWAITE, 117, 113, 96 and 96. Winner's average, 17.38. Time, 4 hours 30 minutes. A large amount was staked on the result, most of it at $100 to $50, although there were some bets at $100 to $30.

The Pittsburgh Sanitary Fair.

PITTSBURGH, Thursday, June 9.

The success of the Pittsburgh Sanitary Fair greatly exceeds the most sanguine expectations. The receipts up to this date amount to over $250,000.

PERSONAL.—Secretary CHASE after spending two or three days in this City, in making arrangements for the new ten-forty loan, left the St. Nicholas Hotel yesterday afternoon for Washington. His conferences with prominent financial men in this City were marked with unusual secrecy.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

Special Dispatches to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, June 9.

MEXICAN AFFAIRS.

The Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs had a protracted discussion yesterday in regard to the Seward correspondence with the French Government touching Mexican affairs. Some of the committee think that Congress ought to give some sort of an expression of their views in relation to this matter. A majority of the committee maintain that it is inexpedient to say anything upon the subject, leaving the Administration to deal with the matter as they think proper. Without coming to any conclusion, it was postponed until next meeting.

GAME OF THE SPECULATORS.

A bold game of the speculators to enhance prices has just been developed here. It turns out that certain rings have bought up large quantities of grain, especially oats, with a view to control the market, the principal object being to compel the Government, who use an immense quantity, to pay large prices to these operators, even exceeding $1 per bushel; thus realizing large sums. The enterprise is likely to fail as Government has a full supply on hand, and will not allow its agents to buy beyond a reasonable price, which is seven to ten cents less than speculators demand. It is said other combinations exist to force up prices in certain articles.

MAJOR-GEN. FRANK BLAIR.

The Senate Judiciary Committee had under consideration again, to-day, the resolution in regard to FRANK BLAIR. The committee will probably report a resolution to the effect that in their opinion Major-Gen. BLAIR is holding his command in violation of law.

BANKRUPT BILL.

Several gentlemen who are known to favor the Bankrupt Bill, being absent this morning when the vote was taken, it is proposed to move a reconsideration, which will undoubtedly secure its passage, as it was only defeated by one vote.

MARINE ENGINES.

The House Committee on Naval Affairs to-day examined several witnesses, among whom were Mr. MOORE, Chief Engineer of the Globe Works, Boston; GEORGE SEWELL, Chief Engineer of the Navy-yard at Charleston, in regard to marine engines. They fully indorsed the theory upon which the present navy is being constructed, and believe it will prove eminently successful. The committee have nearly finished their labors, there being not more than four or five witnesses yet to be examined.

THE REBEL IRON-CLAD TENNESSEE.

A letter just received here from an officer in the navy, off Mobile, states that on the 28th instant the rebel iron-clad Tennessee came out out on a trial trip. She was fully armed. It is said she intends shortly to put to sea. Our blockade squadron are keeping vigilant watch.

Dispatches to the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, June 9.

SERENADE OF THE PRESIDENT.

The Ohio delegation, this evening, accompanied by Prof. MEIXCO'S celebrated brass band, waited upon the President and tendered him a serenade. A large number of persons had assembled at the White House prior to the arrival of the band, in the expectation that a serenade would take place. After the band had performed, in an excellent manner, "Hail to the Chief," and the soldier's chorus from the opera of "Faust," and the throng had become largely increased, the President made his appearance upon the steps of the portico. His appearance elicited three rousing cheers, after which he addressed the assemblage as follows:

GENTLEMEN, I am very much obliged to you for this compliment. I have just been saying, and will repeat it, that the hardest of all speeches I have to answer is a serenade. I never knew what to say on such occasions. I suppose that you have done me this kindness in connection with the action of the Baltimore Convention, which has recently taken place, and with which, of course, I am very well satisfied. [Laughter and applause. What we want still more than the Baltimore Convention, or Presidential elections is success under Gen. GRANT." [Cries of "Good," and applause.] I propose that you constantly bear in mind that the support you owe to the brave officers and soldiers in the field is of the very first importance, and we should therefore bend all our energies to that point. Now, without detaining you any longer, I propose that you help me to close up what I am now saying with three rousing cheers for Gen. GRANT and the officers and soldiers under his command.

Three hearty cheers were then given as proposed, the President leading off and waving his hat with as much earnestness as the most enthusiastic individual present.

Three rousing cheers were then given for the nominees of the convention; after which, the band played an air from the opera of the "Bohemian Girl;" "Happy Moments," from "Maritana," and an American overture.

The assemblage then proceeded to the residence of Secretary CHASE, where several national airs were performed. The Secretary being absent from the City, the serenaders called upon JAMES C. WHITMORE, the State Agent of Ohio, and performed several choice pieces.

CONFISCATION.

In fourteen cases prosecuted under the Confiscation Act of July 17, 1862, the United States Court, yesterday, passed decrees of confiscation, and ordered an early sale, after due advertisement, of all the right, title and interest in the estate of the respective owners, for and during their natural lives, excepting one case, in which the property was personal and the perfecture therefore absolute. Among these cases are those of JOHN LETCHER, Governor of Virginia until recently; TRUSTEN POLK, late Senator from Missouri; WM. T. SMITHSON, of this city; Judge SCARBOROUGH, late of the United States Court of Claims, and FRENCH FORREST, formerly the Commandant of the Washington Navy-yard, and now a rebel Commodore. The property of Judge SCARBOROUGH consists of a valuable law library, which comprises an immense number of volumes for private study. The personality of Judge CAMPBELL, late of the United States Supreme Court, was condemned and sold some months ago. No realty in his name has been found in the District of Columbia. In one of the cases passed upon yesterday by the court, an undivided half was libeled as the property of Hon. GEORGE S. HOUSTON, of Alabama. A quantity of evidence, however, was brought to the notice of the court, showing that he has firmly adhered to the Union throughout the troubles. On the motion of the District-Attorney, the libel was, therefore, suspended indefinitely.

THE NATIONAL ROAD COMPANY.

The bill reported by Representative BRANDEGEE to-day in the House proposes to incorporate a body of directors to be known as the National Railroad Company. They are authorized to construct a railroad—the route to be surveyed and designated by a competent engineer appointed by them, and approved by the Secretary of the Interior—running from the City of Washington through Maryland, Pennsylvania and New-Jersey to the Hudson River, or to connect with some navigable line leading to the City of New-York. The corporation may unite and consolidate their stock with any other companies, and it is provided that to secure the road from interruption by any foreign enemy, in case of war, the same shall cross the rivers Susquehannah and Delaware at some point above tide-water. The capital stock of the company is ten millions, and the United States Government is to appoint two of the fifteen directors. No action has yet been taken on the bill.

UNION LEAGUE RESOLUTIONS.

The following resolutions were passed on Thursday night by the Grand Council of the Union League in session at Baltimore, a copy of which was to-day presented to the President by the committee appointed for the purpose:

Resolved, That the National Council of the Union League of America hereby heartily approves and indorses the nominations made by the Union National Convention at Baltimore on the 8th of June, 1864, of ABRAHAM LINCOLN for President and ANDREW JOHNSON for Vice President of the United States, and as we are bound by our obligations to do all in our power to elect true and reliable Union men to all offices, and as the nominees of said convention are the only candidates that can hope to be elected, as loyal men we regard it as the imperative duty of the members of the Union League to do all that lies in their power to secure their election.

Resolved, That this Council also earnestly approves and indorses the platform of principles adopted by the said convention.

Resolved, That we will, as individuals and members of the Union League, do all in our power to elect said candidates.

INTERNATIONAL TELEGRAPH.

The proposed telegraphic communication with Russia, by way of Behring's Straits, finds many friends, owing to its commercial and international importance. Its strongest advocates are those who best understand its merits, from a close investigation of the entire subject. The bill reported to-day by Senator CHANDLER, of Michigan, from the Committee on Commerce, to facilitate such communication, accompanied by the letter of Secretary SEWARD, is among the evidences of this fact.

THE NEW-YORK STATE MILITIA.

The Ninth New-York State Militia, having served its term of three years, arrived in Washington to-night. They are under command of Lieut.-Col. CHALMERS, and will probably leave to-morrow for their homes in that State.

OCEAN STEAMSHIP SUBSIDIES.

Representative WASHBURNE, of Illinois, made an adverse report to-day, in the House, on the memorial of the New-York Chamber of Commerce, asking for encouragement to ocean steam navigation.

Gen. ELIJAH WARD, of the Committee on Commerce, presented the views of the minority, setting forth at length arguments and data in favor of subsidies for the accomplishment of the views of the memorialists. The report lies on the table for the present.

REBEL PRISONERS.

The Commissary General of Prisoners has directed that all officers and men, except guerrillas, now held as prisoners of war in the Old Capitol Prison, be immediately sent to Fort Delaware. The guerrillas will be retained at the Old Capitol under strong guard.

PROCEEDINGS OF CONGRESS.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, June 9.

TELEGRAPH BETWEEN AMERICA, ASIA AND EUROPE.

Mr. CHANDLER reported a bill from the Committee on Commerce to encourage and facilitate telegraphic communication between the Eastern and Western Continents, which grants to PERRY DONOUGH COLLINS and his associates the right of way over any unoccupied lands in the United States, one-quarter section of land for every fifteen miles of telegraph. It is designed to connect with the line from the mouth of the Amoor River through Asiatic Russia, via Behring's Straits, and down the coast of Russian America. It stipulates that if the line is constructed within five years, the Secretary of State shall contract for the use of the line for the years ensuing for the use of the Executive, Legislative and Judicial Departments of the Government, paying the sum of $50,000 per year. The grantees are allowed to run a steamer on the Pacific coast for the use of the line.

NEW MILITARY AND POST ROADS.

Mr. HOWARD introduced a bill to establish certain wagon, military, and post roads in Michigan, with the amendments recommended by the Committee on Public Lands. Passed.

COMMERCIAL INTERCOURSE BETWEEN THE LOYAL AND DISLOYAL STATES.

Mr. MORRILL, from the Committee on Commerce, moved to take up the bill "in addition to the several acts concerning commercial intercourse between the loyal and disloyal States, and to provide for the collection of captured and abandoned property, and the prevention of frauds in States declared in insurrection."

A PEACE RESOLUTION.

Mr. DAVIS offered a joint resolution to restore peace among the people of the United States, which was read.

Objection was made to the reception of the resolution, and the Chair decided that it was not in order.

Mr. DAVIS contended that the objections were void, as the resolution had been read by its title.

Mr. JOHNSON said he would vote against each of the resolutions, because he thought they were ill-advised, but nevertheless he thought they should be disposed of.

Mr. CONNESS thought the resolutions were insurrectionary, and he was not in favor of taking the vote on their adoption or rejection.

Mr. LANE moved the rejection of the resolutions.

Mr. DAVIS wished the resolutions to lie on the table.

Objection was made to this.

Mr. HOWARD said the Chair had decided that the resolutions were not before us in fact, and that we had not received the paper. The gentleman from Kentucky had appealed from that decision, and the question was whether the decision of the Chair should be sustained.

Mr. GRIMES said the bill was before the Senate, having been read once, and the resolution of the Senator from Indiana to reject the bill was in order.

Mr. DAVIS contended that as his resolutions had been read by their title they were before the Senate. The decision of the Chair was sustained.

COMMERCIAL INTERCOURSE BILL.

The consideration of the bill offered by Mr. MORRILL was then resumed.

Mr. MORRILL said the general character of the bill was two-fold. The act of March, 1863, provided for agents to collect certain property of persons in rebellion. By certain other acts all commercial intercourse between the loyal and disloyal States was declared forfeited. The act simply provides for the appointment of agents under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall collect abandoned and other property in insurrectionary districts. Under the proviso of the law of 1861, the President was authorized to allow commercial intercourse in certain cases. The committee, therefore, endeavor in their bill to prohibit all commercial intercourse between the States and sections which are declared by the President to be in insurrection. The bill, as amended, also simply provides that it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury to appoint agents whose business it shall be to collect all abandoned property which has been declared to be taxable to be converted to the use and support of the army.

CONSULAR AND DIPLOMATIC APPROPRIATION BILL.

A message was received from the House asking for another Committee of Conference on the Consular and Diplomatic Appropriation Bill.

On motion of Mr. FESSENDEN, a committee was appointed to meet that of the House on the subject.

COMMERCIAL INTERCOURSE BILL.

The Senate then resumed the consideration of the Commercial Intercourse Bill.

Mr. COLLAMER said the difficulty was this: Was there any provision in the bill in case we took Richmond to keep the people from starvation? How, under the provisions of the bill were we to get along in places we had held before we had effectually and fully crushed the rebellion? The idea of reclaiming any State or part of a State to allegiance until the military power of the rebellion was subdued, was preposterous. The military power of the rebellion must be subdued before we could declare any State in the Union.

Mr. SHERMAN said his people were very desirous of opening a restricted trade with the people in rebellion, believing that a lawful commerce would do as much toward reclaiming the people in rebellion as armed men. We have either to trade with these reclaimed people, starve them, or feed them at the expense of our Commissary Departments of our marching armies. He hoped no such measure as this would, at the present time be adopted, and that at least it would not be pressed.

Mr. TEN EYCK said the committee regarded this act as of the utmost importance and though he would ask for its postponement until such time as it was quite satisfactory to Senators, he thought every day it was postponed we were doing a serious injury to the Union cause. We, under the present system of unrestricted trade, were not only feeding the rebels, but supplying them with powder and bullets. He could mention facts which would make every American Senator's bosom tingle with shame. He was afraid that in many quarters our efforts were directed more to trade than to the crushing of the rebellion.

Mr. SAULSBURY would ask whether these acts and things had been done by members of the ruling party.

Mr. TEN EYCK said he knew no party in this struggle, and only expressed his fears and desires to root out all sorts of corruption come from where it may.

The further consideration of the bill was then postponed.

THE COMMUTATION CLAUSE—ONE YEAR MEN.

The unfinished business of yesterday taking precedence, the bill to prohibit the exemption of persons from liability to military duty by reason of the payment of money, was taken up.

Mr. WILSON withdrew his amendment of yesterday in order to allow Mr. COLLAMER to introduce amendments which met his approval.

They are as follows:

And be it further enacted, That all calls for drafts hereafter made under the act entitled "An Act for enrolling and calling out the National forces, and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1863, and of any act in addition thereto or amendment thereof, may be for a term not exceeding one year.

And be it further enacted, That this act shall not extend to or include drafts to be made in any district or subdivision thereof to fill its quotas of calls already made, but the same shall be completed under the laws in force before passage hereof.

And be it further enacted, That no person drafted on future calls shall be liable to be again drafted until the present enrollment shall be exhausted.

And be it further enacted, That the number of men furnished from any district for the service of the United States beyond and above the quota on calls previously made, and the term of the service of each man shall be considered and allowed to said district in calls hereafter made.

Mr. BROWN said: If we see fit to draft these men for three years we take the same course as for one year, and the only question was the disposition or indisposition of the person to serve if drafted, which the Government had never taken into consideration—he hoped never would. He had heard no argument in favor of this defrayal of the time of the draft, except from those who were liable to and dreaded the draft.

Mr. HENDRICKS did not believe that we could obtain men enough by a compulsory draft to whip ROBERT E. LEE. He thought the volunteering had been as great during this Spring as the honorable Chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs hoped, and expected it would be. This was due to the increased bounties. The authorities said, notwithstanding the boasts made, that we needed men for three years. Thus we were taking the life-blood of the country. He favored the clause allowing the President to draft men for one year as an independent proposition.

Mr. NOBLE said the crisis had come when it had become necessary for every man to be called upon for the defence of the country. He would have been glad to popularize the draft; but the time had come when there was no other alternative but to resort to stringent measures to raise troops for such a time as was needed. He thought the commutation clause should be repealed. He had always opposed it, believing that if a man was a soldier, he should be, like the soldier of the South—a soldier for the war.

Mr. LANE, of Indiana, said only seven per cent. of the men had been brought into the army under the commutation clause. He opposed the argument of his colleague, that heavy bounties would procure men to fill our armies. He said that LEE's army was composed mainly of conscripts. In the war of 1812 our army was composed mainly of conscripts. He dissented from the position of his colleague that the country should cry peace, and accept peace. Whether the war lasted one year, five years, or one hundred years, no matter what might be the drain upon the blood of the people; he would never be content until the rebellion was crushed, at whatever cost it might be done. Because great sacrifices had been made, it was no reason why we should abandon this contest for the grandest principle the world ever knew. If we abandoned this grand principle, then the sacrifice of blood and treasure we had made was useless. The President of the United States was now the instrument, in the hands of God, to write the grandest page in human history.

Mr. RICHARDSON said the Senator from Indiana (Mr. LANE) was mistaken in saying that the men of 1812 were drafted men. We couldn't make as efficient soldiers in five months with good officers as you could in five years. If we were going to conduct this war to a successful conclusion, we should, perhaps, have to call for the services of himself and his venerable friend from Indiana. (Mr. LANE.)

Mr. LANE, of Indiana, said a lot of politicians in Washington had sent forward the announcement that the Administration had departed from the original purpose to restore the "Constitution as it is and the Union as it was." These politicians had in a great measure, by creating this impression, interfered with the prosecution of the war.

Mr. HENDRICKS wished to know if it was not a very proper question for the people to ask whether this war was being waged for the restoration of the Constitution as it is and the Union as it was. He would send Commissioners to the South whenever a peace alike honorable to the North and South could be secured. As a Christian gentleman he believed his colleague would do likewise. What union did the present contest secure? Nothing but the carcass of our former Union. He repeated what he had said in Indiana, that in this war we had no right to interfere with the institution of Slavery at the expense of the blood and treasure of the North. If Slavery disappeared, it should be as an incident of the war, not its purpose. In his opinion, however, it was never right to do wrong. In his votes to support the armies he should never support any policy which was subversive of one of the cherished principles of the Constitution. He renewed the question asked yesterday: How many men were there in the field? Before we sent more, was it not right that we should know what had become of those we had sent already? This information was certainly in the possession of the War Department. Should we never know how many we had left, and be obliged to answer such calls as the War Department might make?

Mr. DOOLITTLE said, in his experience, drafted men had proved to be as good soldiers as others. He instanced a regiment of his own State, which, under HANCOCK, had charged the enemy in his intrenchments. He favored the proposition to draft men for one year, saying that we had veterans in the service from whom these new men could receive instruction. When a veteran organization, new men would in six months fight with them with equal bravery. He cited from NAPOLEON's campaigns to show the value of conscripts when placed alongside veteran soldiers. He scouted the idea that Senators on the Republican side disbelieved in the ultimate success of Gen. GRANT, if he were properly supported. This proposition was not urged on any such ground of despondency. He believed that there was a determination on the part of the people to fight this war out until we should have even a better Union than we ever before had. He believed the time would come when Virginia would be superior to New-York in wealth and population, and he would say the same of other States.

A motion was made to adjourn, on which the ayes and noes were called, and the motion rejected.

Mr. MCDOUGALL said if we had the spirit of our forefathers we would have no need to make these endeavors to buy men to fight our battles. A man who bought for money would not fight at all.

The first branch of the amendment was adopted by a vote of 22 ayes against 17 noes, as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Anthony, Buckalew, Collamer, Clark, Davis, Doolittle, Fessenden, Foot, Foster, Harris, Howard, Howe, Lane of Kansas, Morrell, Powell, Richardson, Sumner, Van Winkle, Wade, Wilkinson, Willey, Wilson.

NAYS—Messrs. Brown, Carlisle, Chandler, Conness, Grimes, Harlan, Henderson, Johnson, McDougall, Morgan, Nesmith, Pomeroy, Ramsay, Sherman, Sprague, Ten Eyck, Trumbull.

The remaining sections of the amendment were adopted.

An amendment was offered by Mr. WILSON, that nothing contained in this act shall be construed to apply to the draft ordered to fill the quotas already assigned.

Pending the discussion of this amendment, the Senate, at 5½ o'clock, adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, June 9.

RAILROAD BETWEEN NEW-YORK AND WASHINGTON.

Mr. BRANDEGEE, of Connecticut, (Union,) from the Select Committee on the subject, reported a bill providing for the construction of a line of railway communication between the Cities of New-York and Washington, and to constitute the same a public highway and military road and postal route. He asked that the bill be printed and recommitted to the committee, and that a day be fixed for its consideration.

Objection was made to the course proposed, and a debate followed, during which,

Mr. BROOKS, of New-York, (Dem.,) said that only a small portion of the Select Committee had read the bill, and that they desired it to be printed that they might carefully examine its contents.

Mr. BRANDEGEE asked Mr. DAVIS, of Maryland, who had opposed the consideration of the bill, to suggest a day when it might be taken up.

Mr. DAVIS, of Maryland, (Union,) declined to do this, considering that the interests of his constituents were involved in the proposed new road.

Mr. WEBSTER, of Maryland, (Union,) said that the committee had instructed its Chairman, Mr. BRANDEGEE, to make the motion he did, and nothing more. The bill could not have been reported but for the fact that they desired it to be printed and recommitted. It had never been read and considered by all of the committee.

Mr. BRANDEGEE said, in reply to his excitable friend WEBSTER, who had brought back with him the spirit of the Baltimore Convention, that he (BRANDEGEE) had simply done what the committee instructed him to do. If the House should refuse to designate a day for the consideration of the bill, he should move that it be put on its passage.

THE BANKRUPT BILL.

Further proceedings on this subject were prevented by Mr. JENCKES, of Rhode Island, calling up the Bankrupt Bill, which was yesterday ordered to be engrossed.

The bill was then rejected by yeas 64, nays 65.

The following is the vote:

YEAS—Messrs. Alley, Allison, Ames, Arnold, Ashley, Baldwin of Michigan, Baldwin of Massachusetts, Beaman, Blow, Brandegee, Brooks, Broomall, Brown of Wisconsin, Chanler, Ambrose W. Clark, Cole, Davis of Maryland, Davis of New-York, Dawes, Dixon, Donnelly, Driggs, Eliot, Farnsworth, Fenton, Frank, Gaston, Grinnell, Herrick, Hubbard of Iowa, Hulburd, Jenckes, Kalbfleisch, Kasson, Kelly, Kellogg of New-York, Littlejohn, Longyear, Marvin, McIndoe, Miller of New-York, Morehead, Morris of New-York, Leonard Myers, Norton, Odell, Rice of Massachusetts, Rice of Maine, Shannon, Sloan, Spaulding, Starr, Sweat, Thayer, Thomas, Upson, Van Valkenburgh, Ward, Washburne of Massachusetts, Webster, Wheeler, Wilder, Windom, Woodbridge.

NAYS—Messrs. Jas. C. Allen, Wm. J. Allen, Aneona, Bailey, Baxter, Blair of Western Virginia, Bliss, Boutwell, Boyd, Freeman, Clark, Cobb, Coffroth, Cox, Craven, Dawson, Denison, Eckley, Edson, Egerton, Eldridge, Finck, Gooch, Hale, Harrington, Harris of Illinois, Higby, Holman, Hutchins, Ingersoll, Johnson of Ohio, Julian, Knapp, Lazear, Lehland, Logan, Long, Mallory, Marey, McDowell, Morrill, Morris of Ohio, Morrison, Amos Myers, Noble, O'Neil of Pennsylvania, Orth, Pendleton, Perham, Price, Randall of Pennsylvania, Robinson, Rogers, Ross, Schenck, Scott, Stevens, Stiles, Strouse, Tracy, Voorhees, Wadsworth, C. A. White, J. W. White, Wilson, Winfield.

Mr. CRAVENS, of Indiana, moved to reconsider the vote, and lay that motion on the table.

Pending this question the morning hour expired.

PASSENGERS ON SHIPS AND STEAMERS.

Mr. WASHBURN, of Illinois, from the Committee on Commerce, reported a bill, which was passed, to ensure the more certain enforcement of the law regulating the carrying of passengers in ships and steam vessels, mainly between New-York and California. It provides heavy penalties for taking an excess of passengers, ($10,000 for the California lines,) and requires all steamers to receive specie for the Government, on such terms as are allowed to other carriers.

BAGGAGE TO BE SEALED.

The bill providing that goods, trunks, carpet-bags, baggage, etc., be sealed, etc., in the United States as in Europe, and for the increase of revenue inspectors to sixty in number, mainly on the Canada frontier, coming up,

Mr. BROOKS, of New-York, remarked that he supposed the bill was a dire necessity in conjunction with an almost prohibitory tariff and the Internal Revenue Bill, but when this bill went into operation an American would scarcely know his own country, and generally suppose himself to be in Europe, not in the United States. He asked if the increase of inspectors to the number of sixty was necessary, and what compensation they were to have?

Mr. ELIOT, of Massachusetts, answered that they were necessary, and that their compensation would be the same as other inspectors. The bill, he added, was also a necessity of the times.

The bill was then passed.

FOREIGN AND COASTING TRADE.

The House also passed the Senate bill regulating the foreign and coasting trade on the northern, northeastern and northwestern frontier. It requires boats, sloops, &c., navigating otherwise than by sea, to be enrolled as other vessels, and makes them liable to the rules and regulations concerning registered vessels.

PERSONAL RELIEF.

The House considered the Senate joint resolution, repealing the act for the relief of E. F. and SAMUEL A. WOOD, authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to issue to them duplicate bonds for the Oregon war debt, amounting to over $7,000, claimed to have been lost in the steamer Golden Gate.

During the debate it was said that these bonds were in the mails which were recovered, and that several of them had made their appearance.

Mr. HALE, of Pennsylvania, read evidence to show that neither Mr. WOOD, of Boston, one of the owners, nor his agent, ever heard of the recovery of any of these bonds. The Government could lose nothing by issuing duplicates, as sufficient security was given by the gentlemen named.

The joint resolution was passed, and the House adjourned.

PHŒNIX INSURANCE COMPANY OF BROOKLYN.—The Phœnix, of Brooklyn, commenced in 1853, with a capital of $200,000. Since then it has steadily progressed, till its receipts for a single year are stated at $300,000—an amount of income larger than that of any American company with the same amount of capital. It has paid dividends to the amount of $304,000 to stockholders, being an average of 15 per cent. annually. During its first five years it did almost entirely a local business. It is said to have been as successful, in the management of its agency business, as any other company in the State. The Phœnix has now added $300,000 to its capital, thus coming up to the standard of enterprise in these times, and making its capital half a million. To this is added its surplus of $222,219 20, and its assets reach a total of $722,219 20. With this increase of capital the Phœnix will, of course, increase its business. It has opened a new office at No. 139 Broadway, adapted in all respects to the wants of a first-class corporation.—Journal of Commerce.

CATARRH CURED.

THE CASE OF HUTCHINGS, THE "LIGHTNING CALCULATOR."

There was published in these columns a few days since the remarkable cure of Hutchings, the "Lightning Calculator," so well known to the public during the many years he exhibited his wonderful arithmetical powers at Barnum's Museum, by the celebrated Oculist and Aurist, Dr. Von Eisenberg, of this City. Hutchings is represented to have been at the point of death, and but for the timely interference of the Doctor, would now be resting in his grave. This is a remarkable case, and worthy of the attention of persons similarly afflicted.

We think it is but just to Doctor Von Eisenberg to call public attention to his case. There are hundreds in the community suffering from catarrh, who, like the "Lightning Calculator," if not actually praying for death, are ready to accept of anything that promises to relieve them from their distresses. To such we would say, trifle not with inexperienced men, but consult, without unnecessary delay, Dr. Von Eisenberg, who, at least, has the honesty to assure his patients whether it is within his power to make them whole or not.

DEAFNESS CURED.

From the Tribune.

EARS TO THE DEAF.

Every man, and especially every woman, believes in his or her physician. There are philosophical minds which hold to an abstract faith in Allopathy, or Homeopathy, or Hydropathy, or some other form of scientific cure; but with the world at large the belief is not in the system, but in the doctor. Especially is this true as regards aurists and oculists. The patient who has recovered his sight or his hearing is sure that the blessing could have been restored to him by no other practitioner than that particular one by whom his eyes or ears were opened. Dr. Von Eisenberg is among our best-known aurists. He has not lent us ears as a brother practitioner has eyes, and in whose skill, therefore, we believe above all others. But we hear of him from those who esteem him not merely as a surgeon, but as a benefactor. A recent case has been related to us, for the truthfulness of which we can vouch, though we can name no names. The patient was a lady who had been deaf from infancy, as a consequence of some of the ailments to which children are liable. Latterly the disease had taken an acute form, and the patient was subject to intense suffering. The deafness was rapidly becoming complete, and the general health breaking down under the physical exhaustion attendant upon constant pain. Ordinary remedies and ordinary advice were useless, and Dr. Von Eisenberg was called in. We need not repeat his diagnosis, for that would be only a list of hard names to the general reader. But he detected at sight the seat of disease, first in one portion of the organism, then in another, and with manipulation as skillful as his insight was accurate, he removed the causes, and she who, from infancy, had heard with difficulty, and latterly hardly at all, was restored first to perfect hearing and then to perfect health. Dr. Von Eisenberg's advertisement reminds us of this case, which we thus briefly relate, though not at his solicitation. Let him that hath not ears, hear.

SIGHT RESTORED.

CONCERNING EYES AND OCULISTS.

Of the five senses, that which we call seeing is the most important and most valued. In proportion as this sense fails us, we are reduced to helplessness. If entirely destitute of sight, how slow would be our progress in knowledge, and how limited our sphere of action and usefulness. Endowed with it, the universe becomes a new creation, clothed with beauty and diversified by that infinite variety which never fails to attract the mind and heart.

For several months past this has been a practical subject to us. An inflamed condition of the eyelids communicating itself to the pupil, rendered the discharge of daily duties not only painful, but dangerous. Attributing it to the effect of a cold, we endured it through the Spring, with the hope that with the return of warm weather it would entirely disappear. But in this we were doomed to disappointment. Summer returned, but not our wonted sight. What might have been the result, either of further neglect or of incompetent treatment, we cannot say.

Stating our case to a friend, he assured us that a similar one in his own family had recently been treated with entire success by Dr. Von Eisenberg, of this City. Satisfying ourselves by more particular inquiries that the doctor is no empiric, but a scientific oculist and aurist, we concluded to seek the benefits of his treatment, which we have now reason to acknowledge is very great. Though but a few weeks under his care, the appearance of our eyes has totally changed. The pupil is now full and clear, and the lids are entirely free from inflammation. The doctor says that the optic nerve has been weakened and the retina assumed a chronic inflammatory state, affecting more or less all the other tissues, and threatening, if neglected, to end in Amaurosis. Opthalmitis, is the term we believe, which oculists apply to eyes affected as were ours. Having obtained the much desired relief, we take great pleasure in acknowledging our indebtedness to the talent of Dr. Von Eisenberg, and of calling to it the attention of others who may be suffering from a similar or even worse condition of their eyes. It is said that Providence provides an antidote for every bane. It is certain that the eye is, in these times, subject to severer trials than formerly. Let us be thankful, then, that as we increase the tendencies which destroy the organ of vision, the progress of science keeps pace with these tendencies, if not in advance of them.

The Publisher's Circular for June says:

"If the mantle of Washington Irving has fallen on any living, it is upon Mitchell. The polish, shrewdness, humor, tenderness and lovableness, are the same in both."

The present work will please everybody. Indeed, as we mount from the Basement, through story after story—they are mystically seven—until we find ourselves in the quiet lodgings under the roof in the Town of Torquay, we regret our House is not as high as the Tower of Babel was intended to be, and that our upward ascent and the companionship of our guide terminate so soon."

THREE NEW BOOKS
READY THIS WEEK.
D. APPLETON & CO., Nos. 443 and 445 Broadway,
Publish this Day:

I.
THE PHILOSOPHY OF HERBERT SPENCER.
FIRST PRINCIPLES.
Large 12mo, 507 pages. Price $2.

The present volume is the first of a series designed to unfold the principles of a new philosophy. It is divided into two parts, the aim of the first being to determine the true sphere of all rational investigation; and of the second, to elucidate those fundamental and universal principles which science has established within that sphere, and which are to constitute the basis of the system. The scheme of truth developed in these First Principles is complete in itself, and has its independent value; but is designed by the author to serve for guidance and verification in the construction of the succeeding and larger portions of his philosophic plan.

II.
FREEDOM OF MIND IN WILLING;
OR,
EVERY BEING THAT WILLS A CREATIVE FIRST CAUSE.
By
ROWLAND G. HAZARD.
1 vol., 12mo, 456 pages. Price, $2.

"Whatever opinion may be formed of the success or failure of my effort to elucidate this subject, I trust it will be admitted that the arguments I have presented at least tend to show that the investigation may open more elevated and more elevating views of our position and our powers, and may reveal new modes of influencing our own intellectual and moral character, and thus have a more immediate, a more direct and practical bearing on the progress of our race in virtue and happiness, than any inquiry in physical science."—Extract from the Author's Preface.

III.
HISTORY OF THE ROMANS UNDER THE EMPIRE.
By
CHARLES MERIVALE, B. D.
To be completed in 7 vols., small 8vo. Handsomely printed on tinted paper. Price, $2 per vol., Cloth; half Morocco, $3 50.
Volume 4 Now Ready.
CONTENTS:
Vols. I. and II.—Comprising the History to the Fall of Julius Cæsar.
Vol. III.—To the Establishment of the Monarchy by Augustus.
Vols. IV. and V.—From Augustus to Claudius, B. C. 27 to A. D. 54.
Vol. VI.—From the Reign of Nero, A. D. 54, to the Fall of Jerusalem, A. D. 70.
Vol. VII.—From the Destruction of Jerusalem, A. D. 70, to the Death of M. Aurelius.
This valuable work terminates at the point where the narrative of Gibbon commences.
"When we enter on a more searching criticism of the two writers, it must be admitted that Merivale has as firm a grasp of his subject as Gibbon, and that his work is characterised by a greater freedom from prejudice, and a sounder philosophy."
"This history must always stand as a splendid monument of his learning, his candor, and his vigorous grasp of intellect. Though he is in some respects inferior to Macaulay and Grote, he must still be classed with them as one of the second great triumvirate of English historians."—North American Review, April, 1863.

The said bonds will bear interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum, payable s mi-annually, on the first day of May and November in each year, and the principal will be redeemed November 1, 1873.

On presenting to the Comptroller the receipts of the Chamberlain for such deposits, the parties will be entitled to receive bonds for equal amounts of the par value thereof, bearing interest from the dates of paymentis.

NOTICE TO SHAREHOLDERS OF THE PITTSBURGH, FORT WAYNE AND CHICAGO RAILWAY COMPANY.—The undersigned, commissioners, authorized to sell thirty-five thousand new shares of the capital stock of said company, by joint vote of the shareholders and bondholders, for the purpose of constructing a double track, procuring additional equipment, &c., now propose to sell thirteen thousand shares of the same as follows:

Those proposing to issue to the shareholders, who stand registered as such on the books of the company at 3 o'clock P. M. of the 16th of this month, one share for each five shares then standing in their name at the par value of $100 for each share.

Books of subscription will be opened at the office of Winslow, Lanier & Co., No. 52 Wall-st., on the 11th June, and kept open until the 20th June, at 3 P. M., when each shareholder can shall send communicate signify his wishes by letter, addressed to J. F. D. Lanier, Chairman. The new shares thus subscribed for will bear dividend from the 1st July proximo.

Payments will be required as follows: One-fourth on the 21st June, on notification of acceptance; one-fourth on the 15th July; one-fourth on the 15th August, and one-fourth on the 15th September.

Transferable stock scrip will be issued, redeemable in full-share certificates on final payment of the instalments.

Non-compliance with any of the conditions of this subscription subjects to forfeiture any payments made thereon.

This stock is mainly to pay for iron rails, rolling-stock, &c., already advantageously purchased. The high price of labor, and the great difficulty of procuring the same, and the enhanced rates for all materials, in the opinion of the chief engineer and the chief executive officers of the company, render it altogether improbable that any further amount of the stock will be offered during the present year.

If a further amount can be economically expended in increasing the capacities of the line this year, the company will probably have other means to meet the same.

The commissioners reserve the right to extend the time of subscribing to non-resident shareholders who may desire to avail themselves of the benefits of this notice, on such terms and conditions as the commissioners may impose.

The commissioners also reserve the right to dispose of at their discretion, for the benefit of the company, any of the shares not taken by shareholders under this notice.

PRIVATE DISEASES CURED IN THE shortest possible time, by DR. WARD & CO., No. 50 Lispenard-st., near Broadway, without the use of mercury. The Chief Consulting Physician of the Dr. WARD, from the hospitals of London, Paris and Edinburgh, is the discoverer of the only certain and reliable remedies for the diseases of a private character. In 28 years' practice he has cured more cases of Secret Diseases and Wrong Treatment than all others combined. He can and will cure you in less time and at less expense than any physician in the city. Those who have been robbed of their money and health, call; it will take but little money and time to restore you. If you have been unfortunate, call at once. By his special experience in this much neglected branch of medical science, he is enabled to guarantee a cure in the most complicated cases. Recent cases of Gonorrhœa or Syphilis cured in a few days, without change of diet or hindrance from business. Secondary Syphilis—the last vestige eradicated without the use of Mercury. Involuntary emissions stopped in a short time. Sufferers from Impotency, or loss of sexual power, restored to full vigor in a few weeks, privately and speedily cured by a new treatment. Persons at a distance failing to receive prompt treatment elsewhere, may get a permanent cure effected by writing a full diagnosis of their case, addressed to Dr. WARD, No. 61 Franklin-st. Call, send, or write.

CAUTION.—CHLORODYNE—IN CHANCERY.—It was clearly proved before Vice-Chancellor Sir W. P. Wood, by affidavits from eminent hospital physicians in London, that Dr. J. Collis Browne was the discoverer of Chlorodyne; that they prescribe it largely, and mean no other than Dr. Browne's.—See Times, Jan. 16, 1864. The public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other than Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE, which is affirmed by medical testimonials to be the most efficacious medicine ever discovered for Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Spasms, Rheumatics, &c. None should be without it. T. J. DAVENPORT, No. 33 Great Russell-st., London, sole manufacturer. Observe particularly, none genuine without the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne" on the Stamp. Agent, New-York, Mr. JAMES ASPINWALL, William-st.

MANHOOD AND THE VIGOR OF YOUTH Regained in three days by Dr. POWERS' ESSENCE OF LIFE. This wonderful agent restores manhood to the most shattered constitution, radically curing Seminal Weakness, Spermatorrhœa, and all impediments to marriage generally; Nervousness, Mental and Physical Incapacity, resulting from self-abuse, &c. The time required to cure the most inveterate case is one week. Failure is impossible. This life-restoring remedy should be taken by all about to marry, as its effects are permanent. Young man, are you the subject of nocturnal and body destroying disease, secret habits? Dr. POWERS' Invigorating Essence is a never-failing cure. Sold by WALTER POWERS, M. D., No. 61 Franklin-st., between Broadway and Elm-st., New-York.

THE GREAT ENGLISH REMEDY FOR GOUT AND RHEUMATISM.

THE MEMORIAL OF MR. COLLINS.

MR. CHANDLER TO MR. SEWARD.

SENATE CHAMBER, WASHINGTON, April 14, 1864.

Hon. William H. Seward, Secretary of State:

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith a printed copy of the memorial of PERRY McD. COLLINS, representing that he has obtained from the Government of Russia a grant of the privilege to construct a telegraph from the mouth of the Amoor River to the Russian possessions in America, and a similar grant from the British Government in British Columbia, and praying the cooperation of the Government of the United States to enable him to complete his enterprise.

The Committee on Commerce of the United States Senate, to whom this memorial has been referred will be glad to receive from you such information upon the subject as may be in the possession of the Department, together with your views upon the expediency of granting the prayer of the memorialist.

I have the honor to be, Sir, your obedient servant,

Z. CHANDLER,

Chairman of Committee on Commerce of the United States Senate.

MEMORIAL OF MR. COLLINS.

To the Honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

The memorial of P. McD. COLLINS, a citizen of the United States of America, and a resident of the State of California, most respectfully represent: That he has obtained from the Imperial Government of Russia, privilege to construct a line of telegraph from the mouth of the Amoor River, in Asiatic Russia, to the frontiers of the Russian Possessions in America, adjoining the possessions of Great Britain.

In connection with the grant from Russia, the Russian Government stipulate, upon certain conditions, to construct a continuous line of telegraph connecting the European system with the Pacific Ocean, about 8,000 miles east of London, and on the route of a line which may be projected to Pekin and the great commercial cities of China. Your memorialist also represents, that after having obtained the Russian grant, and upon the representation of the state of the case and the facts to the Government of Her Majesty, he has been authorized by the British Government to construct a line of telegraph across the intervening territory of British Columbia. Thus the grants from Russia and England authorize the construction of a continuous line of telegraph, which is to connect Europe with the United States across the whole of Asia and the northwest coast of the Pacific.

The whole country, except a portion of the route in British Columbia, over which this proposed line must pass, is sparsely inhabited, and presents no local inducement for the construction of a telegraph.

The sole inducement to the construction of a telegraph over this great extent of country is the union of Asia and Europe with the American system of telegraph lines, and by as nearly as physically possible an overland route.

The great progress of telegraphs both in Asia and America, since the proposition was originally made to isolate a portion of this northern overland route, in order to unite Europe and America, has cleared away from the path of this enterprise many apparent difficulties suggested in the early stages of the undertaking.

Russia has extended her telegraph from St. Petersburgh to Irkoutsk, a distance of 4,000 miles to the east, and now a line is being constructed along the Amoor River, which is to connect with the line in course of construction from Irkoutsk to the east. Thus it will be seen that Russia is rapidly approaching with a continuous line the Pacific Ocean.

On our side of the world we have already reached the Pacific, and up toward the British Possessions, and as far as Portland, Oregon.

From our northern frontier, adjoining British Columbia, to the mouth of the Amoor River, in Asiatic Russia, the distance may be stated in round numbers at some 5,000 miles.

Previous to granting the right of way for the construction of a telegraph, the Russian Government authorized your petitioner to survey a route over all that portion of the Russian dominions east of the Amoor, on to British Columbia.

On two previous occasions your petitioner presented to Congress the facts of the case, and reports were made thereon, copies of which are hereunto annexed, marked A and B.

The reasons which then existed not only hold good now, but are greatly enhanced by the absolute grant of right of way that is withheld.

There is much in the North Pacific valuable to us as a nation in a commercial point of view, aside from the special interest particularly involved.

Our Pacific whaling fleet resort in considerable force to the seas, bays and sounds, not only of the Pacific, but of the Arctic; in one year more than seventy American vessels have passed through Behring's Straits, and largely over one hundred have visited the waters adjacent, and the Okhotsk Sea.

The commerce of Japan and of the Amoor region, increasing from year to year, makes it requisite that we should have a more perfect knowledge of these interesting regions of the North Pacific.

PERRY McD. COLLINS.

SECRETARY SEWARD TO HON. Z. CHANDLER.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
WASHINGTON, May 14, 1864.

To the Honorable Zachary Chandler, Chairman of the Committee on Commerce, in the Senate of the United States:

SIR: I have the honor to reply to your letter of the 14th of April last, upon the subject of the memorial which has been submitted to Congress by Mr. PERRY MCDONOUGH COLLINS.

Mr. COLLINS is an American citizen, residing in California. He has been, since 1856, commercial agent of this Government for the Amoor River. The public archives, as well as the records of Congress, furnish satisfactory evidence that the country could not have a more enlightened, assiduous and faithful representative.

The project which he submits for the consideration of Congress is the construction of a line of telegraph from some point on the Pacific Telegraph line, or the northern extension thereof, in one of the Northwestern States or Territories, across the border of the United States, and through British Columbia and Russian America to Cape Prince of Wales; thence by an inland route around the sea of Okhotsk to the mouth of the Amoor River.

The telegraph line thus proposed is intended, primarily, to connect at the last-named place with a line to be extended from thence to Irkoutsk, the capital of Eastern Siberia.

At that important town a line of telegraph begins, which stretches through Tomsk and Omsk, in Western Siberia, Katherinburg (on the Asiatic European frontier, Pirm, Kasam, Nijni-Novogorod and Moscow to St. Petersburgh, the capital of the Russian Empire.

The line projected by Mr. COLLINS, from the Pacific Telegraph to Amoor river, with its anticipated extension by the Russian Government to Irkoutsk, would be the one link now wanted to supply direct and unbroken telegraph communication from Cape Race in Newfoundland on the Eastern coast of America, across the Eastern and Western continents and the Pacific Ocean to Cape Clear, in Ireland, the westernmost projection of Europe.

When a submarine telegraph shall be successfully laid between Cape Clear and Cape Race, it will, together with the link I have last before described, complete a telegraphic circuit around the earth between the parallels of forty-two degrees and sixty-five degrees of north latitude.

These questions arise from Mr. COLLINS' memorial, namely:

First—Is the enterprise feasible?

Secondly—Would it be useful?

Thirdly—Has it a just claim on the Government to the patronage which he solicits?

I shall examine these points in their order:

First—The feasibility of the enterprise. The difficulties to be surmounted may be classified—physical, political, social and financial.

The most prominent physical difficulty is the extent of territory to be traversed. The starting-point must be chosen in either Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado, Utah, Montana, Idaho, Oregon or Washington. Thence the distance to be traversed through British America to the line of Russian America, about 600 miles; the distance through Russian America to Cape Prince of Wales, about 1,000 miles; the length of a submarine cable across Behring's Straits would be 40 miles, and the distance from East Cape, by an inland passage around the Sea of Okhotsk, and through the settlements of Okhotsk, Ayan and Shanter's Bay, which are well known stations of the whale fishery, to the mouth of the Amoor River, would be about 2,500 miles. The entire length of the line would be about 5,040 miles. Operative telegraph-wires have already been stretched on this continent of the aggregate length of 50,000 miles, and similar wires have been stretched on the Eastern Continent of the aggregate length of 200,000 miles. Operative submarine telegraph-wires have been laid of the lengths, respectively, of 200 miles and 500 miles, from Dover to Heligoland, and from Malta to Tripoli.

Thus it will be seen that the mere extent of the route to be traversed in the present case does not constitute an insurmountable, nor even a serious difficulty.

The physical obstacle which next presents itself is the peculiar formation of the regions to be traversed. That portion of the route which lies within our own territory is chiefly mountainous, and the projected telegraph line must at least come along declivities of the mountains, even if it should not be found necessary, in one case, to surmount them. British Columbia presents a similar topography. But there the mountains are divided into three ranges, whose courses are from north to south, while intervening valleys invite the introduction of telegraphs and roads. The Pacific coast of Russian America is chiefly level. The portion of Siberia which lies between East Cape and the head of the Sea of Okhotsk is, for a large extent, a steppe, or plain, with gentle elevations, occasionally rising into mountainous ridges.

At the head of the Sea of Okhotsk a range of mountains must be crossed, and the region lying between that range and the mouth of the Amoor River is of the same character as that before mentioned, which extends from the same range northward to East Cape. The highest elevation to be overcome on the whole line would be found in the Rocky Mountains, within the United States, and this elevation may be estimated at eight thousand to ten thousand feet.

Operative telegraph lines have already been stretched over steppes, in both continents, similar to those thus described. The Pacific Telegraph Line, in crossing the Sierra Nevada, rises to an elevation greater than that which is to be surmounted on the line now under examination.

With the exception of timber, all the materials of a telegraph line are light and portable. Metallic wire sufficient for a mile of telegraph, together with the materials for insulation, weighs not more than four hundred pounds. Sufficient timber awaits the builder along the route through the United States and British Columbia. Timber is also found on those portions of the projected line which lie within the Russian domains on each continent, with the exception of a timberless steppe five hundred miles wide, on each side of Behring's Strait. There the needful timber can be brought near to the line, either by sea or from the forest-covered shores of navigable rivers.

The temperature of the region through which the northern part of the line would pass, is very low. Nevertheless, Winter is less severe than it is between the same parallels of latitude on the Atlantic coast. The telegraphic line which connects St. Petersburgh with Archangel on the White Sea, and also the telegraphic line which passes around the Gulf of Bothnia and connects St. Petersburgh with Tornea, are maintained in operation, without difficulty, although they cross as high parallels of latitude as those which lie in the way of Mr. COLLINS' line.

The waters of Behring's Strait are about one hundred and eighty feet deep, and they are frozen through one half of the year; but the congealed mass when broken, generally takes the form of anchor ice, and not that of icebergs. Thus, climate seems to offer no serious obstacle to the enterprise; while it is not entirely unworthy of consideration that in cold latitudes timber used in any necessary structure is less perishable than timber used in warm latitudes, while less of insulating material is demanded in high latitudes than is required in more genial climates.

The only political difficulty in the way of the enterprise is the fact that it requires concerted aid from three several States namely—the United States, Great Britain and Russia. The two last-named Powers have already, with enlightened and fraternal liberality toward the United States, made all the concessions which were demanded. Therefore, if Congress shall grant the application of Mr. COLLINS, no political obstacle will remain.

That portion of our own country in which the enterprise is to be carried on is so well known, as hardly to require a description more minute than I have already given. It is newly and as yet thinly settled. The case is the same in British Columbia. Indian tribes are found along the American part of the route, but they have been so well subjected to the influences of society and government, through the operations of the fur trade, that no serious resistance from them need be apprehended.

The inhabitants of Asiatic Russia, who dwell inland, are nomadic Tartars, affecting much independence. They are, nevertheless, not savage, like the American natives. After centuries of internal war, they have now settled into a state of semi-civilization, in which they are accustomed to barter with whalers, with exploring parties, and with the Government agents of Russia, and they are hospitably inclined by that intercourse.

The result of the survey of facts thus far made is, that there are no insuperable obstacles, either physical, political, or social, in the way of the projected line of telegraph.

In regard to the expense which it requires, I must be content to refer the Committee of the Senate to the estimates which have been submitted by Mr. COLLINS. They have been made with a view to secure from private sources an advance of the moneys to be expended, and at the same time to obtain from the Governments of Great Britain, Russia, and the United States, the necessary political aid. It may be assumed, therefore, that they were prepared honestly and cautiously, and with as near approach to accuracy as is possible in regard to a design in which so much that is to be done must be done under conditions never before tried. Mr. COLLINS estimates the whole cost at five millions of dollars. A just legislative caution would probably induce Congress to double that estimate.

I understand that an association is already formed, with a capital of ten millions, to be devoted to the enterprise. I am, therefore, of opinion that it is entirely feasible.

I proceed, in the next place, to consider the probable usefulness of the enterprise. It is needful here to assume that the line of telegraph proposed will be extended immediately from Amoor River to Irkoutsk, so as to complete the telegraphic chain over the two continents. The agreement with Russia leaves no room of doubt on this point.

* * * * *

Setting aside the temporary disturbance of war, the merchant, or the manufacturer, the miller, the farmer, the miner, or the fisherman of Halifax, Quebec, Portland, Boston, New-York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Charleston, New-Orleans, Galveston, Montreal, Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Chicago, St. Louis, Memphis, St. Paul's, Little Rock, Denver, Salt Lake City, Carson City, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Sacramento, Portland, with the aid of an inter-continental telegraph, would be in daily, and, in case of need, in hourly correspondence with producers and consumers on the Amoor, where the fur trade of Asia is gathered up; with Sevinsk, the depot for the overland traffic between Russia and Japan and the mineral treasures of Nerchinsk; with Kiakhta, the centre of the international commerce of Russia and China; with Irkoutsk, Moscow, St. Petersburgh; with all the cities of Western Europe, including Constantinople; with the Cities of Alexandria, Cairo and Suez; and with every other town, city or hamlet, on either continent, now in telegraphic connection with the several marts of trade which have been enumerated.

Every one knows, however, that neither the American nor the European system has yet attained to its ultimate developmeal. Transient wars now delay the establishment of wires in Pensacola, Havana, San Juan, Panama, Quito, Lima, Valparaiso, Buenos Ayres, Montevideo, Rio Janeiro, Surinam, Caracas and Mexico, and the incorporating of them, with all their local ramifications, into one American telegraph system. On the eastern continent, neither the domestic disturbances, nor the rivalries of States, nor their occasional collisions, prevent a continual expansion of the telegraphic system. The telegraph construction of Russia at this day, like her system of railroads, presents the framework of an imposing structure, the dimensions of which are boldly outlined, while the connections and extensions yet remain imperfect and unfinished.

It has been already mentioned that the Emperor has bound himself to extend the main eastern and western line from Iokoutsk to the mouth of the Amoor River. This extension is now rapidly advancing. But this is only a single, and not very prominent, part of the work which the Emperor has begun. His design embraces nothing less than the following stupendous works, namely: A telegraph wire, with the necessary submarine cables, from the mouth of the Amoor River across the Straits of Tartary, over the Island of Sakhalin, across the Straits of La Perouse, over the Island of Jerro, through Hakodadi, and across the Straits of Sangar to Jeddo, the capital of Japan.

Secondly—A telegraph wire from the confluence of the Usuri with the Amoor, which confluence is seven hundred miles above the mouth of the latter; thence southward, on the bank of the Usuri, to Vladi Kingka; and thence to the port of Vladi Vostok, on the coast of Tartary, opposite to that part of Hakodadi, on the eastern coast of the Japanese Sea. Vladi Vostok is selected by the Emperor for his naval station on the Pacific Coast.

Thirdly—A telegraph wire from Irkoutsk, before described as the Capital of Eastern Siberia, through Kiakhta, now the entrepot of European and Chinese overland commerce, through the vast territory of the Mongols to Megate in the Chinese Wall at Yahol, and thence to Pekin, the Capital of the Chinese Empire. American citizens temporarily residing in that country, are now soliciting, with good prospect of success, permission from the Chinese Government to extend this last-mentioned line overland through China, to terminate with the needful branches at the ports of Nankin, Shanghai, Amoy and Canton, on the Pacific Coast, opposite to California.

There are already in operation twelve thousand miles of telegraph wire in the Continent of Australia. This Australian telegraph system, which now is so purely local and isolated, is, nevertheless, expected to be brought into combination by alternating submarine and inland wires with the Chinese and Russian wires last described.

Fourthly—A telegraph wire from a station on the main Continental-Russian line at Omsk, near the southern boundary of Asiatic Russia; thence, passing through Mongolia and entering China at Hirck, sometimes called Illy; thence, crossing Turkestan, Bokhara and Balk, to Cabool, in Afghanistan; thence to capital points in the Punjaub, where it will meet the telegraphic system of India, and thus become a medium of communication between London and the colonial dependencies of Great Britian, the Netherlands, Spain and Portugal, on the shores and islands of the great Indian Ocean.

Fifthly—A telegraph wire from Kazan, on the main central Russian line, through Georgia and Circassia, along the western shore of the Caspian Sea, to Teheran, the Capital of Persia; thence to the Euphrates, at Bagdad; thence, descending along the banks of that historical river to its mouth, at the head of the Persian Gulf, there to be connected with the oriental telegraph system of India last before mentioned.

When we take into consideration the fact that Russia has already brought all her chief inland markets and mines, as well as her principal ports on the coasts of the Arctic Ocean, into telegraphic communication with her Capital, it is readily perceived that by offering to cooperate with us in giving effect to Mr. COLLINS' design, Russia actually invites us to put forth our national energy from every point within our borders where industry of any kind dwells, and especially from our Northwestern and Western States, and apply that energy in the great work of renewing and restoring the long-languishing civilization of the regions where our race first impressed its dominion upon the globe appointed for its residence. Certainly, it cannot be necessary to say that such efforts belong to the class of human labors which are pronounced to be doubly blessed, because they bless equally those who are subjects, and those who are the performers of them. It seems impossible to overestimate the direct effect of this new application of the national energy in producing a rapid and yet permanent development of the agricultural, forest, mineral and marine resources of the United States. Nor is it any more practicable to assign limits to the increase of national influence, which must necessarily result from the new facilities we should acquire in that manner for extending throughout the world American ideas and principles of public and private economy, politics, morals, philosophy and religion.

In attempting to make such estimates, it is important to remember that the telegraph wire is as yet a newly invented instrument, timidly employed and clumsily handled, with a very imperfect knowledge of the fulness of the power that resides in it. It costs us now one half a mill per mile to speak a single word through the cheapest telegraph wire of any considerable length. This is vastly more costly than the average transmission of messages in writing by employing the steam engine, either on land or on water. This great expense of telegraphic communication is due, however, not at all to any inseparable quality of the telegraphic machine, for that machine is easily constructed of very simple and cheap materials. The expensiveness is due to two transient conditions of the telegraph system: First, the charges now justly imposed upon it for rewarding the inventor; secondly, the fact that, as yet, fixed habits of communication in ancient forms prevent frequent resort to the new mode of correspondence, and customary investments of capital which are sufficiently remunerative cause it to be sparingly applied to the perfection of the new system. When these merely ephemeral embarrassments of the magnetic telegraph shall be removed, the magnetized wire will become, for the chief purposes of social, commercial, and political communication, as practical as, by reason of its adoption, it is effective.

I proceed to consider the question whether the enterprise deserves the patronage Mr. COLLINS solicits for it. Throughout the remarks which I have thus far submitted, I have not without design called it Mr. COLLINS' enterprise. It is truly his, because it was he alone who conceived and projected it, and who has clothed it with the substantial form which enables the three great States, whose concerted action he solicits, to cause it to be put in operation. But, in another sense, it is entitled to be regarded as an enterprise of the Government of the United States. During all the time that Mr. COLLINS has been engaged in maturing and developing it, and presenting it to the consideration of Russia and Great Britain, he has been acting under the instruction and with the approbation of the Department of State, and a knowledge of that fact has not been withheld from Congress.

* * * * *

What Mr. COLLINS asks of Congress, is the grant of a right of way across the public lands, with the right to take therefrom materials necessary for constructing the line; the use of a national vessel, suitably officered and equipped, to make surveys and soundings along the North Pacific Coast, beyond the limits of the United States, and to aid in prosecuting the work; and, finally, a stipulated compensation for the Government use of the line, when it shall be constructed. If the views I have submitted are just, this demand for patronage is neither unnecessary nor unreasonable. We could not withhold it without showing a want of appreciation of the liberality and friendship which have been manifested toward the United States by Russia and Great Britain in the proceedings they have adopted toward the same enterprise. I do not know any one object lying within the scope of our foreign relations more directly important than the preservation of peace and friendship with those two great and enlightened Powers. Nor can I conceive of any one measure of national policy that would more effectively tend to secure that great object than the construction of this proposed inter-continental telegraph.

I forbear to urge the project in competition with the proposed line across the Atlantic from Cape Clear to Cape Race, which, notwithstanding past difficulties, I yet hope to see speedily completed. The two lines would naturally aid and strengthen each other. If they should even come into competition, it would be more advantageous to the world to have the use of both than the use of only one of them. One might be expected to operate when the other should be accidentally suspended. Nor can it be reasonably doubted that the great interests of human society will, at a very early period, require more than one, and more than even two transoceanic, world-encircling telegraphs.

I have the honor to be, Sir, your obedient servant,

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

Union Ratification Meeting.

INDORSEMENT OF THE NOMINEES OF THE BALTIMORE CONVENTION.

A meeting under the auspices of the Brooklyn Central Union Club was held at their headquarters, corner of Fulton and Pineapple-street last night, for the purpose of indorsing the nomination of ABRAHAM LINCOLN for President and ANDREW JOHNSON for Vice-President. There was a large attendance. The room was filled, and among the audience were a number of ladies: Mr. STEPHEN M. GRISWOLD, the President of the Union Club occupied the chair and made a brief introductory address, after which Mr. A. J. SPOONER, Jr., read the resolutions, which were as follows:

Resolved, That while the nation is engaged in a war for its life, we consider that all minor differences should be abandoned, and all citizens should rally together for the integrity and perfect unity of the Union.

Resolved, That we hail with enthusiasm the nominations of ABRAHAM LINCOLN for President, and ANDREW JOHNSON for Vice-President, recently made at Baltimore, as preeminently expressing the confidence of the citizens in the two men who have been the most signal beacons of loyalty to the National Union; that these nominations at the same time rejoice the hearts of all loyal citizens, and carry terror and dismay to all traitors at home or in the rebel States, who had calculated on divisions and disaffection.

Resolved, That we approve of all the measures of the President aiming at the extirpation of Slavery, and that we favor the further measure of an amendment of the constitution, terminating, forever, the existence of Slavery within these United States.

Resolved, That the gratitude of the nation is eminently due to the army and navy, and that we will not cease our efforts to provide them with all necessary subsistence and reinforcements until the strenuous and persevering efforts shall prove successful in the restoration of the undivided Union.

Resolved, That the success of Republican Institutions and the safety of this nation demand that no monarchical power shall by force obtain a footing upon this Continent.

Resolved, That the future strength and unity of the nation, as well as the spread of intelligence, of population and commercial wealth demand that the Pacific Railroad shall be constructed.

Resolved, That we are glad to know that it is the determination of this Government and of the leaders of our armies, that equal protection shall be extended to all soldiers of whatever color, who fight for freedom and the Union, and that the people will sustain those leaders who visit with the severest retaliation the instances of barbarism and cruelty inflicted upon any of the soldiers of the United States.

The resolutions were adopted with unanimity and enthusiasm, after which addresses were made by Judge S. N. PETTIS, of Pennsylvania; Gen. F. S. CAREY, of Ohio; Gen. J. F. FARNSWORTH, of Illinois, and others. Mr. WM. H. BURLEIGH read a poem in laudation of the President, which was well received. The meeting adjourned at a late hour.

Board of Education.

A special meeting of the Board of Education was held yesterday afternoon, President MCLEAN in the chair. The reading of the report of the committee appointed to investigate the charges of corruption against the local board of the Fourth Ward was called for. The committee state that the testimony taken by them "shows that a perfect system was inaugurated by a majority of the Trustees of the Ward to extort money from school teachers and others in their employ. It appears that Jeremiah Murphy, Daniel Healey, Jeremiah Coughlin, James White, John H. Lester, Trustees, and Felix Murphy, Commissioner, constituting a majority of the trustees, formed themselves into a "ring," to manage the school affairs of the ward. They elected Jeremiah Murphy, Chairman, Jeremiah Coughlin, Secretary, and appointed JOHN WHITE, Principal of Grammar School No. 26, as Clerk, who was selected as their 'agent,' to whom teachers were expected to apply, to ascertain upon what terms they could get an appointment. The evidence shows that their 'agent' performed his duty with alacrity, and with a heartlessness worthy of his employers. It appears that he not only summoned the teachers to come to him, but that he called on their parents and friends as to the amount they should pay for their appointments—the sums varying in amount from $50 to $600, according to the position they sought for. When it was stated that the amount could not be paid at once, on account of the poverty of the teachers, their 'agent' agreed to take it in installments."

The committee state in conclusion that they "are constrained to say that the Trustees of the Fourth Ward, with the exception of Commissioner ARTHUR O'DONNELL and Trustee P. JOSEPH KLEIN, have acted in a manner that brings lasting injury and disgrace on our school system and our City, and particularly on the citizens of the Fourth Ward, and that Jeremiah Murphy, James White, Jeremiah Coughlin, Daniel Healey, John H. Lester, Charles Kelly, and William P. Kirk, Trustees of the Common Schools in the Fourth Ward, and FELIX MURPHY, Commissioner of Common Schools for said Ward, have been guilty of disgraceful conduct in the matters connected with their official duties as school officers."

The committee recommend the removal of the Local Board of Trustees; also, FELIX MURPHY, School Commissioner, and that the District Attorney be instructed to prosecute the parties implicated in the forgeries of the proceedings, and be requested to submit the same to the Grand Jury for action. Some discussion followed the reading of the report on the part of Messrs. MURRAY and MILLER, after which, on motion of Mr. BOGART, the report of the committee was unanimously adopted, when the meeting adjourned.

Extensive Robberies of Merchants.

TWO YOUNG THIEVES AND A RECEIVER OF STOLEN GOODS IN CUSTODY.

The firm of LATHROP, LUDDINGTON & Co., merchants, doing business at Nos. 23 and 25 Park-place, made application recently to Capt. JOURDON, of the Sixth Precinct, asking him to find out who in their employ were guilty of robbing them of large quantities of goods, consisting of spool-cotton, pocket-books, needles, &c. The Captain and Officer WOODRIDGE, of that precinct, began an investigation of the case, and soon found that MICHAEL JAMESON, a lad aged 14 years, in the employ of the firm, was the guilty party. They therefore took him into custody. When taken to the station-house and questioned, he confessed having stolen large quantities of goods from his employers, and that he had sold them to WM. SIMPSON, a news-dealer, at No. 57 Centre-street. SIMPSON'S place was searched by the officers, and goods to the amount of $300, belonging to Messrs. LUDDINGTON & Co., were seized. While searching SIMPSON'S premises large bundles of gloves and hosiery, valued in all at $500, were found. These were taken by the officers on suspicion that they had been stolen. SIMPSON was arrested as a receiver of stolen property. When questioned, the latter said he had bought the goods from a man named WM. WOOD, residing at No. 8 Dover-street, who was about starting a band of negro minstrels in Brooklyn. Inasmuch as WOOD had an advertisement in the daily papers for a banjo-player, it was thought that some valuable light might be shed on the case by making inquiries of WOOD. On investigation, it was found that Mr. WOOD was a boy 15 years old, and was employed in a store at No. 84 Leonard-street. His movements were watched, and he was caught in the act of temporarily depositing hosiery and gloves in a grocery store near his residence. WOOD was then arrested, and after diligent inquiry it was found that he had long been in the habit of stealing the above-named articles from Messrs. BENTON, WILLIS & Co., doing business in the same building where he was employed. The most of these thefts were committed by young WOOD immediately after the porter had opened the store in the morning, and while the latter was engaged in sweeping out the store. Over $700 worth of hosiery had been taken in this way within the last few months. A large portion of the property has been recovered. Both the young thieves, and also the receiver, SIMPSON, were taken before Justice HOGAN yesterday afternoon. The latter was locked up in default of $1,000 bail. The boys pleaded guilty and were required to find bail in $500 each. WOOD gave the required security, and the other lad was committed to the Tombs.

Street Department Contracts.

On Wednesday, bids were opened at the Street Department for contracts for a number of jobs, including a large contract for filling low lots on Fourth-avenue. The following shows the lowest bid for each job, name of bidder, time designated in which to perform the work, &c.

Regulating and grading Sixty-fifth-street, between Third and Fifth avenues—seven bids; time, twelve months; to J. L. MOORE, at $24,968 75.

Flagging four feet wide and setting curb and gutter stones in Forty-eighth-street, between Lexington and Sixth avenues—10 bids; time, 120 days; to MICHAEL RABBIT, at $5,400 48.

Flagging four feet wide and setting curb and gutter stones in Forty-fifth-street, between Lexington and Fourth avenues—10 bids; time, 30 days; to M. GAVIN, at $1,213 10.

GENERAL CITY NEWS.

A NINETEENTH WARD ROWDY SHOT BY A POLICEMAN.—A report was made to Inspector CARPENTER, yesterday, by Capt. HARTT, of the Nineteenth Precinct, that on Wednesday night a number of rowdies assaulted and knocked down a stranger in the First-avenue, near Sixty-eighth-street, for the purpose of robbing him. Officer CLARK, of that precinct, hearing the screams for help, proceeded to the spot through a dark lane-way, (none of the lamps in the vicinity being lighted,) and ordered the desperadoes to desist, or he would shoot them. The violence continued, and the policeman discharged one barrel of his revolver, the ball from which took effect in the right side of one of the assailants, whose name is ISAAC ALLEN. The wound is a very severe one. He was conveyed to the station-house and thence to St. Luke's Hospital. ALLEN'S confederates made their escape, and have not yet been arrested.

SUPPOSED FATAL STABBING AFFRAY BETWEEN COLORED MEN.—On Wednesday night last, two colored men, named EDWARD GAINES and ALBERT WALKER, both of whom occupied apartments at No. 82 West Broadway, became involved in a quarrel, during which GAINES seized a large knife and stabbed WALKER in the shoulder, breast and neck. It is believed that the wounds will prove fatal. He now lies at the New-York Hospital in a critical condition. Coroner WILDEY yesterday took the ante-mortem examination of WALKER, and the jury found a verdict against GAINES. The latter has been arrested by the Fifth Precinct Police, and upon the rendition of the verdict, the Coroner committed him to the Tombs to await the result.

FIRE IN BROADWAY.—Building No. 497 Broadway took fire yesterday afternoon, in the premises occupied by Mrs. S. SCOTT as a millinery establishment. The fire originated on the fourth floor of the building, in a bed-room occupied by the servant, and was caused from the careless handling of matches by a child. Damage to the stock, $1,200; insured for $3,000 in the Howard and Pacific Insurance Companies. The stock of L. M. MCINTOSH, occupant of the first floor, was damaged slightly. Insured for $5,500 in the Brooklyn and $3,000 in the Howard Insurance Company. The building was damaged about $400, and is fully insured.
